PREFACE.

SHORTLY after the previous edition of this book was published, a few belated letters, containing material intended for insertion, were intrusted to the subscriber by the author, to whom she had rendered some slight assistance in preparing the work for the press, with the injunction to preserve them with care for use in another edition, which must be kept in view, but which he should probably not live to superintend. In the lapse of years, and as the result of much correspondence, this nucleus has gradually gathered to itself the mass of records and memoranda which has, with much care and study, been wrought into a form convenient for publication, and is now placed in the hands of those who, by a fondness for antiquarian matters, may be led to an examination of this volume.

It may not with justice be charged to the stupidity of the scribe, nor yet to the proverbial treachery of type, and the carelessness of the proof-reader, that errors occur in works of this character. Many, from lack of interest, fail to respond to letters of inquiry and requests for information, and in the multitude contributing material, may be some who have not facility in stating the intricacies of family relationships through many generations, in a perfectly intelligible way, and it is also true that many people write proper names and figures with a lack of care which makes the task of the transcriber one of extreme perplexity. Furthermore, it frequently happens that duplicate records received from different sources disagree in dates and in other particulars; and it is a consideration replete with satisfaction, that those who are the most accustomed to similar work will view with the greatest leniency the imperfections that may here be observed.

It will be noticed that the Introduction has been rearranged, bringing together scattered paragraphs bearing upon the same subject, and that it has been enriched with much that is new and of interest concerning the origin and early history of the Yorkshire family, from whom we Americans bearing the same name have descended.

In the former editions no fixed rule was observed in regard to following out the order of descent in female lines. It chanced that in the cases of the aunts of the author, Nos. 132, 140, and 141, three generations were given, and these have been retained in an abbreviated form; while, with these exceptions, in view of the fact that otherwise this much enlarged work would be swelled to impracticable proportions, — making it as much a record of other families as of that which inherits its patronymic from John Spofford, — it has been deemed best to fix a limit at two generations in the lines of those who have married out of the family name. This is much to be regretted in the cases of certain persons who have manifested special interest in the work, but whose relationship lies outside this limit, and it is hoped that this explanation may be accepted as a sufficient apology in the matter.

The system of numbering, so satisfactorily used in the old book, has been retained. To aid those who are unaccustomed to the perusal of such records, it may be explained that each person receives a number when his name first appears, as a member of his father's family, and the same number is placed against his name where it recurs as the head of a family in the succeeding generation. A star (*) indicates that a name is so to appear, and the number of the generation is given at the top of each page. Lines of descent may thus be easily traced, both forward and backward, through the entire record.

While the subscriber takes this opportunity to thank all who have rendered aid in her work by words of encouragement or by prompt and courteous responses to letters of inquiry, she considers herself under special obligations, which are hereby acknowledged, to Mr. Paul N. Spofford, of New York; Mr. Markham Spofford, of London, England; Prof. John Boynton, of Syracuse, N. Y.; and Mr. Sidney Perley, of Boxford, Mass., for numerous historical references; to Mr. Edgar L. Spafford, of Troy, N. Y., for carefully collated records of many families; and to the committee rendering efficient service in superintending the mechanical details of publication, — Mr. A. A. Spofford, of Lawrence; Mr. John C. Spofford, of Everett; and Mr. Joseph H. Spafford, of Milton.

In Memoriam.

DR. JEREMIAH SPOFFORD.

THE skill of a master's hand is needed to portray upon a canvas, which may be viewed with advantage by a distant beholder, some object made familiar only by close contact. With this in mind, the present writer essays, with somewhat of embarrassment, the task of furnishing a memorial of her father, fearing that fireside studies may have but inadequately prepared her for the broader delineation of character which shall truthfully represent it to persons unacquainted with the subject of the sketch, and withal serve as a not unfitting tribute to his memory whom she thus seeks to honor.

It was during the war of the American Revolution that the mother of Dr. Spofford was led as a bride from the house of her father, Col. Daniel Spofford, in Georgetown, Mass., a spot recently made familiar as the gathering-place of the widely scattered representatives of the family bearing the name of Spofford.

It is easy to imagine the surroundings of this newly wedded pair, — the meagre furnishings of the home; the sanded floors; the busy wheel and reel and shuttle, which primitive domestic thrift must have soon set in motion; the glowing hearth-stone, around which young feet fast gathered, till seven children had been received into the rapidly widening family circle, and three of them been called to fairer worlds, before the wintry day, Dec. 8, 1787, which first gave light to him who is the subject of this sketch.

If it be indeed true that character and mental attributes take their tone from the circumstances of birthplace and early surroundings, if a rigorous training begets tenacity of purpose, and a scarcity of opportunity creates intellectual hunger and thirst and an eagerness of outreach in habits of thought, it is scarcely possible that he of whom we write could have been other than the sort of man he became.

Though the home was humble and the fields were sterile in which he passed what he was wont in later life to call a lonely boyhood, he seems to have given early indications of an ability to find companionship in books, and food for thought in his own environment.

Many were around him who had done service in the patriot army. His father had been a soldier; his paternal grandfather had been captain of a militia company; the father of his mother, the Col. Daniel Spofford mentioned above, had seen active military service; and the keen ears of the boyish listener were often regaled with the tales of patriotic heroism with which the air was all astir.

The discussion by fireside and farmstead of the political issues of that day, and of the principles which shaped the Constitution of the new-born nation, the anxiously awaited and tardily received news of European warfare, the horrors of the French Revolution and the dramatic career of the first Napoleon, gave him an early familiarity with the history of the times, and doubtless created the interest in political affairs which characterized him to the end of life.

As he passed into young manhood, his susceptible mind, athirst for knowledge, gathered to itself from all accessible sources the material for the supply of its own growth; and though debarred by the stress of adverse circumstances from pursuing a liberal course of education, it is quite evident that he made good use of his somewhat meagre opportunities for intellectual culture.

Concerning this period of his life, he at one time wrote:—

“My labors were not often severe, and the mornings, noons, and nights of those farming days gave me more time for reading and mental work than I should then have been willing to acknowledge.

“The perusal of Ferguson’s ‘Astronomy’ sometimes intruded hard upon my hours of manual labor, and Adams’s ‘Natural and Experimental Philosophy,’ in five volumes, with illustrations, was in this way studied with more intense interest than I have given to any subject in later life, with more books and more time at my command.

“A small parish library, mostly of religious works, given by the first pastor of the church in Georgetown, Rev. James Chandler, led me through a course of theological reading such as perhaps few young men have pursued without direct reference to a preparation for the clerical profession.”

The story of Dr. Spofford’s education — from the days when he conned his childish tasks under the gentle guidance of Miss Sally Wood, of Boxford, whose praises he never wearied in sounding, through later studies with Dr. Joshua Jewett, of Rowley, and Rev. Isaac Braman, his revered pastor of blessed memory, and a course of medical studies with Drs. Whiton and Parkhurst, of Winchendon, Mass. — is but the story of a multitude of self-made men, who, perhaps oftener in former times than since, fought their way to honorable positions in professional life. Like them all, he was content to toil, courageously leaving the past behind, and perchance viewing the future with solicitous conjecture.

He was licensed for medical and surgical practice in June, 1813, and having been united in marriage with Miss Mary Ayer Spofford, a daughter of Deacon Eleazer Spofford, of Jaffrey, N. H., on Sept. 14 of that year, he located in Hampstead, N. H. ; but, preferring a settlement in his native State, he availed himself, at the end of three and a half years, of an opening caused by the death of Dr. Eben Jewett, the only physician in that part of Bradford, Mass., now known as Groveland, and removing thither he entered the field in which for more than sixty years he engaged in the arduous activities, and met the varying experiences which usually fell to the lot of country doctors of the old régime.

His long connection with the Massachusetts Medical Society, dating back to 1813, and ever marked by a deep interest in its transactions and loyalty to its principles, was but one of the results of his native conservatism, which was as strongly marked in regard to professional work as in all other directions. We quote his own words in regard to his old-school proclivities in medical practice :—

“ I entered the profession, not as an experiment in money making by imposing on the credulous, or following some fashionable ism, and I have adhered to the ancient course, not because it is old, or that I was bound by some superstition or compact to practise on any routine, but willing to gather knowledge from every source, claiming that whatever remedy, adopted from the vegetable or the mineral kingdom, whether discovered or brought into notice in times ancient or modern, by scientific practitioner or quack, homœopathist, hydropathist, or allopathist, whether appropriately used in large doses or small, if it will but heal disease or lessen the ills to which flesh is heir, belongs to our system. This is a system whose basis is as firm as the everlasting hills, and can never be shaken or become antiquated while mortals live and have distresses needing alleviation.”

It is but reasonable to suppose that Dr. Spofford's professional standing and success were often unfavorably affected by his interest in public affairs, and the energy wherewith he was wont in middle life to engage in heated political controversies. In early days a Federalist, afterward a Whig, and yet later, when North and South joined issue, gravitating, with others of kindred views, into the Republican party of the present day, he was always decided in his opinions and unhesitating in their utterance, his pen being ever ready to give pungent expression to his ideas on political questions, or the ever-recurring topics of popular interest.

The relations he sustained with the Haverhill Gazette, from the year 1821 to nearly the close of life, in the various capacities of proprietor, associate editor, and contributor ; his frequent articles in many other newspapers, together with the authorship of a “Gazetteer of Massachusetts,” published in 1860, and many addresses, give attestation to his industry in literary work.

His fondness for antiquarian and genealogical research, of which this volume is an outgrowth, must have originated in his early youth, and is evinced by a paper, which is still preserved, containing a record of his immediate family connection, written in a laboriously legible school-boy hand, vastly unlike the penmanship of his later years, which so often tested the patience of correspondents and proved the dismay of compositors.

Of the varied activities of Dr. Spofford's life we may not now speak, or of the enthusiasm with which he threw himself into enterprises for local improvement in connection with which his energies found scope, leaving their impress on the community in which he dwelt.

The busy years hasted on, each bearing away from him somewhat of physical strength, but leaving his mind still active, though weighted with experiences and memories; and while retaining an interest in things about him, and a keenness of perception often lacking in persons of much fewer years, he became more quiet in mind, a certain native turbulence of spirit changing to tranquillity, and his old-time love of controversy merging itself in a habit of retrospective contemplation.

On Aug. 9, 1876, nearly sixty-three years after their wedding day, the gentler life which had walked beside his own almost like its shadow ceased its earthly existence, and the remnant of his stay seemed but a time of waiting for the shades of life's deepening twilight.

As Dr. Spofford's last days drew near, he furnished a wonderful illustration of the triumph of mind over physical infirmities, describing the hallucinations and mental vagaries with which he was at times disturbed, and characterizing them as way-marks in the "slow gradations of decay." While conversing with the late Rev. James McLean, afterward of Springfield, Mo., but then acting pastor of the Congregational Church in Groveland, of which Dr. Spofford and his wife had become members, Nov. 7, 1819, with apparent effort to summon his waning powers, that he might give clear expression to his thoughts, he spoke of his Christian faith, and of the help he derived from the trust that the revelations and experiences of the future would be under the same beneficent guidance which had sustained him through his earthly life of almost ninety-three years, which in the retrospect appeared as but a brief pilgrimage.

Two days later, Sept. 16, 1880, occurred the final change which left void the large space in his family and in the community which had so long been filled with the influences of his forceful presence.

From the many obituary notices which appeared at the time, we select the following from the graceful pen of Dr. John Crowell, of Haverhill, Mass. : —

“For over half a century Dr. Spofford was a leader in Essex County. His vigorous brain, his indomitable will, his tireless energy, and his stern integrity furnished the elements of his success, and wherever duty called him, there he made his influence felt by the strong personality of his character. By suggestion or questioning or direct antagonism, he pushed every subject with which he came in contact with the sharpness of his analysis and the force of his terse logic. He was not an easy antagonist in the discussion of social ethics or political economy. He had a tenacity in argument that never yielded to sophistry or idle speculation and fanciful theories. His mind was controversial, and hence he challenged the opinions of others, and boldly attacked the schemes of those who set themselves up as reformers. His trenchant pen was wielded in the interest of politics, of education, and historical reminiscences. His conservative nature made him cautious as to new methods, but he always examined them carefully, and accepted and adopted them when convinced of their truth and expediency.

“In his earlier days he was a strong political writer in the Whig party, and he measured lances with the champions of the opposite party with a vigor that told in the stirring battles of that period of political history.

“Dr. Spofford was a persistent opposer of the school system as conducted by the State Board of Education, and especially did he oppose the establishment of Normal Schools, to the detriment of self-supporting Academies of the State. His bold strokes in this direction were not without effect, and the modification of public opinion in regard to the efficiency of our present school system is in no small degree due to his utterances.

“As a physician, Dr. Spofford had the confidence of the entire community and the respect of his professional associates. He was one of the oldest members of the Massachusetts Medical Society, and often occupied prominent positions upon the board of officers. He was a constant attendant at the meetings of the Essex North District Medical Society, where his venerable presence was always recognized with deference and respect by the younger members.

“His exceptionally long life has been crowded full of activity, and he goes to his rest honored and beloved by the friends and neighbors and associates among whom his life work has been accomplished.

“‘O good gray head which all men knew,
O iron nerve to true occasion true,
O fall'n at length that tower of strength,
Which stood four square to all the winds that blew.’”

“ Rather Deathe than false of faythe.”

INTRODUCTION.

FEW families in this country can trace a more authentic record of their European ancestry than can the Spoffords. The name appears in the Doomsday Book, which is a record of the lands of England, as parcelled out after the conquest by William, Duke of Normandy, in the year 1066. The entry in the index of the book is as follows:—

“Spofofd;— Possession Genera, M. mot, prat, silva past; Comitatus, Eurviusc W. R.; Hundred vel Wapentac, Borgescire Wap.; Possessor, Will de Perci; Fol. 322, Col. 2.”

At the place referred to, we find a few lines of abbreviated Latin in ancient characters which, but for the inadequacy of modern type, might with interest be here introduced, and which are evidently a record of extensive domains, of greater interest perchance to the Percys, who still hold them, than to us, though it is certain that our ancestors, prior to the Conquest, were owners, and either, after the Saxon mode, gave their name to this place, or received it therefrom in Norman fashion.

A still earlier allusion to the name is found in the following extract from “Chronicles of the Saxon Times in England,” taken from the History of Ilkley, Ancient and Modern, edited by Rev. Robert Collyer, D. D., and a noted antiquary named Horsfall Turner, published in 1885:—

“A. D. 1065. All the thegens (thanes) in Eoforwicscire (Yorkshire) went to Eoforwic, (York) and there slew all the huscarls (Danish body Guard) of Earl Tostig.

“For the accursed murder of the noble Northumbrian thegens—Gospatric, whom Queen Eadgith commanded to be craftily slain in the King’s Court for the sake of her brother Tosti; Gamel son of Orm, and Ulf, son of Dolphin, whom Earl Tosti commanded to be slain craftily at York the year before, as well as for the immensity of the tax which he had unjustly taken from all Northumbria; the Northumbrian thanes Gamelbearn (son or child of Gamel), Dunstan, son of Athelnoth, and Glonieorn, son of Heardulf, came to York and slew Tosti's huscarls, Anund and Reavensuart (Black Raven), and the following day, two hundred of his courtiers." — Florence of Worcester.

Gamel, son of Orm, was Lord of Thorparch, on the river Thorpe in Yorkshire, and of vast domains. He was murdered by Earl Tosti, the Dane, in 1064. He had two sons, Orm, who married Etheldritha, daughter of Earl Aldred, and Gamelbar or Gamelbearn, Lord of Spofforth, Plumpton, Braham, etc., and revenged himself, against Tosti at York, as related above. From him the Spofforths of Yorkshire are lineally descended.

On a dial over the door of the church of Kirkdale, near Helmsley, in Yorkshire, said to be the oldest Saxon church in England, is the following inscription in deeply graven letters: —

"ORM Gamalsuna bohte scs. Gregorius minster vonne hit wæs al tobrocen and tofalan and he hit let macan newan from grvnde Chr. and Scs. Gregorius in Eadward dagvm Cng. and in Tosti dagvm eorl."

Kirkdale Dial (Yorks. Arch. Jour.).

The translation of which is: "Orm, son of Gamel bought St. Gregory Monastery, when it was all broken and fallen, and he it let make anew from ground, to Christ, and S. Gregory, in Edward days, King, and in Tosti days, Earl."

Gamel, according to the Doomsday Book, had immediately after the Conquest been dispossessed of his lands, at any rate in Ilkley, for we find: —

Terra Willelmi de Perci. [1085.]

(Translated.) "Land of William de Percy. In Ilkley, Gamel had three carucates of land to be taxed, where there may be three ploughs. William now has it and it is waste. Time of King Edward it was valued at twenty shillings. There is a church and a priest, wood-pastures one mile long, and four quarenteens or furlongs broad."

Further: "In Nessfield, Gamelbar had three carucates of land to be taxed where there may be two ploughs."

This is the record of the town and parish of Ilkley, made between 1080 and 1085 A. D., and we gather from it that before the Conquest by William the Norman, in 1066, Gamel was Lord of the manor of Ilkley, and his son Gamelbar, who owned Nessfield, Spofforth, Plumpton, Rougharlington, Brame, Bilton, Rossett, Beckwith, and many other manors in the Knaresborough forest district, was, like Gamel, a Saxon Thane.

In the Calendar of Inquisitions after death, of the year 1353 Calendarium Inquis' post Mortem page 174, No. 52a, 26, of Ed. III. Henricus de Percy, Spofford Maner' cum membris et fœdis pertin' viz. : Lynton, Lethely, et Axelthorpe, Fœda-Folyfate, Aiketou, Spoford, Ribbeston, &c &c &c is the following list of FIEFS OF THE BARONY OF SPOFFORD.

Folyfate, Aiketou, Spoford, Ribbeston, Plumpton, Colthorp, Stockton, Lynton, Heselwode, Sutton, Sighelinghale, Lofthowse, Kibelincotes, Guthmundenhain, Cloughton, Pokethorp, Esthorp, Hoton, Fosseton, Wandesford, Nafferton, Queldryke, Wartre, Thriberg, Edelington, Middleton, Stubbum, Skaln, Colesburn, Nesselfeld, Inwely, Wheteley, Askwith, Dalton, Horton, Casteley, Lethely, Walton, Bergheby, Arlesthorp, Soreby, Hemelsby, Steynton, Asmonderby, Merkingfeld, Hornyngton, Wolsington, Yedon, Rondon, Oxton, Tadcastre, Snawes, Haghornby, Gramhope, Kerkby, Kerkby-Orblawers, Carleton, Midhope, Remington, Neusome, Boulton, Horton, Gersington, Lynton, Ketelwell, Thresfeld, Arnecliffe, Addingham, Rotherneck, Stynton, Estborne, Malghum, Brunby, Swyndon, Halton, Pathorne, Elgfeld, Thornton, Bunyngeston, Difford, Gisborne, et Westeby ("omnia fœda p' dicta pertinent ad maner' de Spofford" = all the preceding fiefs belong to the Lordship of Spofford).

The fiefs attached to a barony, lordship, or manor (at that time these words were indifferently used as the translation of "manerium") were not necessarily contiguous, forming one large body of land, but they were scattered many miles apart, often in several different counties.

Most of the localities named in the above list can now be identified, though in many cases the spelling is somewhat changed. Folyfate is now Follifoot, Edelington is now Edlington, etc. The townships of Follifoot, Linton, Plumpton, and Little Ribston are in Spofford Parish, which contains 3,044 inhabitants. — Moule, Vol. II., 467. Plumpton and Wetherby, the latter a market town of 1,217 inhabitants, are also mentioned as in the parish of Spofforth. — Moule, Vol. II., 468. Probably Wetherby is the fief mentioned in the list as Westeby.

Gamelbar, or Gamelbearn de Spofforth, had a son called William of Spofforth, who had in 1066, the year of the Conquest, four ploughs and nine villains and ten borderers (people of consequence in the position of yeomen), four acres of meadow, wood-pasture one mile long and one broad; the whole sixteen quarenteens long and twelve broad; value in King Edward's time, twenty shillings (query, does this refer to the tax thereon?), and in William the First's time, sixty shillings. (See Doomsday Book.)

This William was, in 1086, deprived of his possessions, for refusing to pay Dane Gelt an obnoxious tax abolished by the Confessor, King Edward. "He assisted Aldred, Archbishop of York, in resisting the imposition, and his estates were confiscated and apportioned among the Norman adventurers, William de Perci, Archil, Gislebert, or Gilbert Tyson, and the King."* — Doomsday Survey, 1086.

Walter, the son of the above-named William, was killed during an invasion of England by Malcolm, king of Scotland (38 Dunhelm, p. 200); and his son John, who lived in the time of Henry the First, A. D. 1105, only distinguished himself by forming an alliance with the ancient family of Plumpton, of Plumpton, near Spofforth, who held vast possessions under the Percys in the neighborhood of Spofforth.†

The next in succession as descendants of Gamel and Gamelbearn were Henry (temp. Stephen), Elwine (temp. Henry II., A. D. 1186), Gamel de Spofforth, who was Marshal to Nigel de Plumpton, William, and Nicholas, who lived in the time of Henry III., 1265, and married Dyomysia de Plumpton (see Plumpton Correspondence, published by the Surtees Society), and his brother, John Spofforth, who is mentioned in the Compætus, or household book, of Bolton Priory, A. D. 1260, now in possession of the Duke of Devonshire, as having sung, in company with Wm. Myoths and the Baron de Greystock, at the festival on the fiftieth anniversary of William de Malgam, one of the monks.

* Three hundred years later, viz., in 1407, King Henry IV. granted the manor of Spofforth to Sir Thomas Rokeby, of Rokeby, for defeating the Earl of Northumberland (a descendant of Will de Perci, the adventurer) at Herselwood, near York. (See Rymer's Fœdera, Vol. VIII., p. 376.)

† At about this period, one John Spafford was made Provost of Limerick. This was before a charter was granted by King Richard, after which the title was changed to Mayor, the powers and duties being the same. The photograph of a page of a "History of Limerick," recently received from Ireland, shows the following: "Part V. Containing a list of the Provosts, Mayors, Bailiffs, and Sheriffs, from the Reign of Richard the first to the year 1786. A. D. 1195. John Spafford, First Provost or præpositus of Limerick, elected and sworn on Monday after Michaelmas Day, and to continue such till Monday after Michaelmas of the year following."

Then came Roger (temp. 1287), who joined in the attack on Scarborough Castle, under Lords Pembroke and de Warrenne, and assisted in conveying Piers Gaveston, the king's favorite, to Blacklow Hill, near Warwick. He obtained pardon for participation in the murder in 1313. — Palgrave's Abstract of Parliamentary Writs, Vol. II., Div. 1, p. 107. Then Robert, who married a daughter of the now long extinct family of Castelay, and had three sons, namely, Robert, of whom hereafter; Henry de Spofforth, a priest in 1338, who held the manor of Grassington as craven or feoffee in trust for Sir William de Plumpton and Christiana, his wife, by a deed dated 18th May, 1338, 12 Edw. III. (See Plumpton Correspondence, Chartul No. 182, now in the Bodleian Library at Oxford.)

Robert, the eldest son, was eighth Prior of Helaugh, elected April 8, 1320, and served thirteen years. (See Dugdale's Monasticon, Vol. VI., p. 437.)

He also had Walter de Spofforth, or, as he signed his name, de Spofford, an Augustine canon, who was also Prior of Helaugh. "Friar Will de Spofford confrater domus sit Roberti de Knaresborough, Vicar of Hampsthwaite near Spofforth. Mort Oct. 9, 1369." — Torres MSS., Archdeaconry of York, 195.

The next in succession was Robert, who married a lady named Evorta, the relict of John Vavasour de Norwode, in 1337, and from him descended Robert, of whom presently, and Roger, who is notable only as having signed as witness to the settlement of the Plumpton estates in 1396, and as being the father of Thomas Spofford, or Spofforth, who was Abbot of St. Mary's, York, succeeding Thomas Pygot in this dignity, June 8, 1405.

"The Abbat of St. Mary's was but little inferior to the Archbishop of the province, being mitred and having a seat in Parliament which entitled him to the appellation of 'My Lord.'

"He and the Abbat of Selby were the only two Abbats thus honored in the north of England." (See Leland's Itinerary, Vol. VII.)

Date of the entry is 8 June, 1405. Entry on skin 19 of the 2d. part of the Patent Roll of the sixth year of the Reign of King Henry the Fourth.

Which is translated as follows:—

June 8, 1405,
6 Hen. IV.

The Royal assent to the election of Thomas de Spofforth, as abbot of St. Mary's, York.

Henry, by the grace of God king of England and France and lord of Ireland, to the guardian of the spiritualities of the archbishopric of York, the see being vacant, sends greeting. Know ye that we have given our royal assent and good-will to the election lately made in the conventual church of the Blessed Mary at York, of their confrere Thomas de Spofforth, a monk of the same house, as abbot of that place; and this we signify to you by the tenor of these presents, so that you might execute that which belongs to your office. In testimony of which we have caused these our letters patent to be made. Witness ourself at York, on the eighth of June, in the sixth year of our reign. By writ of Privy Seal.

“1420 Thomas Spofford Episcopus Herefordiensis primo Abbas Saint Maria Eborac dieu Episcopus Rofensis electus sed ante consecrat, translatus ad Hereford. Sepultus est Spoford Ebor in Mariane Monasterius.” (See Leland's Itinerary, Vol. VII., fol. 66, et Vol. VIII., fol. 77a, 776.)

In 1414, while Abbat of St. Mary's, Thomas Spofforth was appointed by Henry V. one of the ambassadors to the celebrated Council of Constance. This Council was called to put an end to disturbances caused by the election of popes, and also to prevent the spread of the doctrines of Huss. The tribunal is said to have comprised, beside the Emperor Sigismund and Pope John XXIII., who had been elected in the place of Alexander V., lately deceased, more than twenty cardinals, twenty archbishops, ninety-one bishops, six hundred prelates and doctors, and about four thousand priests.

The Council ended the schism by removing the three rival Popes. John XXIII. and Benedict XIII. were deposed, and Gregory XII. voluntarily resigned, after which the Council elected Cardinal Colonna, who took the name of Martin V.

Subsequently Thomas Spofforth was elected Bishop of Rochester, but before installation was appointed by the Pope to the See of Hereford, A. D. 1420, which position he resigned in 1448, and began prebendinare in St. Mary's, York, on Aug. 5, 1456.

“Adm recolludæ memoriæ, Tho; Episc Hereford inter septa mon B. M. Ebor dum vixit prebendinatis, et ibidem decendentio,” — was granted to John Shalford, a monk of that house.

The above appears in a note appended to a bequest in the will of one John Carre, dated 1487, as given, p. 26, Vol. IV., of Testamenta Eboracensia, edited by Canon Raine, published by the Surtees Society, 1871.

The bequest is as follows: “Also I bewit to the Abbot of Seynt Marie Abbay, a payr of Spectacles of sylver and gylted, and a bonet that was sumtyme the Bisshoppis of Hertforth.”

The following is a quotation from the Register of the Corpus Christi Guild in the city of York, published by the Surtees Society in 1872, and edited by Canon Raine.

“To the Corpus Christi Guild Bishop Spofforth was a munificent benefactor. Shortly after his admission he gave to it ‘unum magnum liminare cum toto apparatu.’

“In 1449, after his return to York, he presented the fraternity with a magnificent shrine of silver gilt, valued at £256, which doubtless formed an important feature in their annual processions: and to this valuable gift he subsequently added, as stated in the Register, ‘alia jocalia in numero non pauca.’”

“In an account of a pageant in celebration of the Festival of Corpus Christi, it is related that the most prominent and attractive object was a shrine presented by Thomas Spofford, Bishop of Hereford, in the year 1449, to the Guild, an organization composed of persons of the highest rank, having charge of the annual celebration of the festival.

The following description is given: “The shryne is all gilte havyng six ymages all gylded with an ymage of the birthe of our Lord in mother of perle sylver and gylte, and three small ymages enamyled standing about the same; and a tablett of golde, two golde ryngs one with a safure the other with a perle, and eight other little ymages and a greate tablett of golde having in it the ymage of our Lady in mother of perle, which shryne conteyneth in length three quarters of a yerd and a nayle, and in brede a quarter and half and more and in height half a yerd and over besides the steple standing on the same, said steple having a wether cokke thereuppon, and also beyng within said steple a berall whereyn the sacrament is borne.” — Extracts from the Municipal Records of the City of York, by Robert Davies.

A minute description of this shrine, and of the jewels and ornaments belonging to the Guild, is also given in the Surtees Society Papers, Vol. I., 1871, No. 57.

Canon Raine, a noted antiquary, and one of the Canons of the Cathedral of York, in one of the Surtees Society Papers, York Registry, 4, 1420-1509, Eboracensia, p. 29, gives it as his opinion that this Bishop was the hero of one of the Robin Hood ballads, — known to have been written in the fifteenth century, — in which the outlaw is described as robbing the Bishop of Hereford. The Canon writes : —

“It is quite possible that our Bishop, in one of his numerous journeys to Yorkshire to see his relatives, fell into the hands of the Barnsdale Rovers and lost his money, unde nomen et carmen. It was not every day that a Bishop of Hereford found his way into Yorkshire.

“Some will talk of bold Robin Hood,
And some of Barons bold;
But I'll tell you how he served the Bishop of Hereford
When he robbed him of his gold.”

Canon Raine, being asked for an explanation of the anachronism apparent in the supposed time during which Robin Hood performed his exploits (viz., temp. John and Richard the Lion-hearted), replied : —

“Robin Hood must not be treated as an historical personage with a date assigned to him. The Ballads seem to be of the 15th and 16th centuries, and a robbery of Bishop Spofforth might easily be incorporated in them. They are, no doubt, by various writers, and of various dates.”

The record of Bishop Spofforth's abdication is printed in Rymer's Fœdera, Vol. X., p. 215. In Wilkins's Cornelia, Vol. III., p. 538, is a writ of pardon to Bishop Spofforth for abdicating in favor of his successor.

The Pope testified by his Bull that Bishop Spofford had expended on the building of his cathedral upward of 2,800 marks, and that he had also made great alterations in the Palace of Sugwas, near Hereford, where his initials, T. S., still remain in a stained glass window. (See Burton's Cath. Arc. of England, Vol. III.)

This public-spirited prelate also erected in the Church of Ludlow, within his diocese, a magnificent window of stained glass, said to be one of the finest in England, and in this window is still to be seen a representation of the Bishop in full canonicals, in an attitude of prayer, apparently adoring his patron saint, Saint Anne. The only part of the label remaining is Media precor Anna.

Placed before the Bishop is a table with this inscription:—

Thomas Spofford Dei Gra Hereford Ep'us.

The Yorkshire Heraldic Visitations, according to Whitaker's Richmondshire, Vol. II., p. 31, furnishes the following inscriptions:—

“In the East window of the Church at Catterick in Yorkshire are these figures, 3 St. Anna, and below is inscribed,— Eternum mana mihi Spofford impetret Anna.”

The interpretation of which is: “St. Anna prays that eternal manna may be given to Spofford.”

Also the following inscription:—

Orate pro anima D'ni Thome Spofford Abbatis Monasterii Beate Marie Eborum istius Ecclesie Rectoris.

Which being translated is: “Pray for the soul of Lord Thomas Spofford, Abbot of the Monastery of the blessed Maria of York, and Rector of this (Catterick) parish.”

Bishop Spofforth had two sisters, described in the Register of the Guild of Corpus Christi (p. 19) as,—

Decimo Anno.	AGN: SPOFFORTH	} Sorores abbatis.
1417-1418.	MATIL: SPOFFORTH

At this time the Spofforths appear to have held intimate relations with the Plumpton of Plumpton, for in the Plumpton Correspondence (Surtees Society Papers) it is stated that on Nov. 29, 1450, temp. Henry VI.: “Master George Plumpton conveyed to Feoffees, viz.:—the worshipful Fader and Lord, Thomas Spofford late Bishop of Hereford, and others, lands and tenements in Yorkshire and Ripon, to the uses of a last will and testament.”

The neighborly intimacy here alluded to must have been of long standing, as appears from a story entitled “The Plumpton Marriage with a King's Ward,” published as one of a series of papers under the general name of Legends and Traditions of Yorkshire. In this romantic tale it is related that a certain priest of the family of Spofforth, by performing the marriage service in private, secured to his friend, Gilbert de Plumpton, as his bride, the fair Eleanor de Guilevast, a young heiress, whose love he had won in opposition to the will of King Henry II., whose ward she was.

To return to the direct line of the descent, viz., Robert, who in 1360 married a co-heiress of Thomas de Malebis:—

He had issue, Thomas Spofforth, a priest, who became Vicar and presbiter of Bredon in Leicestershire, appointed 16 Kal. Ap. 1377, resigned 1381.—Nichol's Leicestershire, Vol. III., p. 669. The second son was John Spofforth, who resided at Newsam, near Spofforth, mentioned in the Pipe Roll, 15 Richard II., 1396, who married Maria Meynel. They had a son called Robert, who resided at Menthorpe, near Selby, and who was a member of the Corpus Christi Guild of York, described in its records as "Dom. Robert Spofforth monachus," A. D. 1431. (See Surtees Society Papers, 1871, Vol. I., p. 32.) He had a sister named Elizabeth Spofforth, a member of the same Guild.—Vol. I., p. 150.

From this Robert last mentioned descended lineally Robert, who lived at Wistow Manor, near Selby, in 1480, and who married a daughter of Bryan Roncliffe of Cowthorpe, near Spofforth (third Baron of the Exchequer); and they had a son, Bryan Spofford, a priest, who was Rector of Barton in Ryedale, now called Barton le Street, near Helmsley in Yorkshire. This priest married, contrary to the edicts of the Catholic Church, as did Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, and others at that period. On his refusing to put away his wife, he was deprived, in Queen Mary's reign, 1554, of his benefice. (See Yorkshire Archæological Journal, part 37, p. 95.)

From this date the family became Protestants, and appear to have declined in property and influence for many generations; but one of the grandsons of Bryan Spofforth (the priest recusant) was John Spofforth, Vicar of Silkeston Parish in Yorkshire, who was born in 1588.

We now quote from Burke's Visitation of the Seats and Arms of England, Vol. III., omitting his references to the persons mentioned on the foregoing pages, and of whom we have gleaned knowledge from other sources. After an extended notice of Thomas Spofforth, Bishop of Hereford, Mr. Burke proceeds: "After this the family became converts, and John was for many years Vicar of Silkeston, from which he was ejected, for non-conformity, in 1663. John, his son,—with many families from that part of Yorkshire,—was driven during the civil wars to America, where, as one of the Pilgrim Fathers, he was founder of a large and influential family in Massachusetts." Mr. Burke is Ulster King of Arms, and his recognition of this connection is sufficient to establish it as a fact that John, the immigrant of 1638, was a son of him of the same name and faith who was made Vicar of Silkeston four years later.

The Journal of the House of Lords for Dec. 24, 1642, after a preamble setting forth the bad character and want of qualification of many who had been promoted to ecclesiastical offices by the late King, Charles I., just dethroned, proceeds as follows:—

"It is this day ordered by the Lords and Commons that John Spofford, clerk, shall be enabled to serve the church and receive the profits of the Vicarage of Silkeston, in the West Riding of Yorkshire. And the Archbishop and the Archdeacon are hereby prohibited to present or grant institution or induction to any other clerk for the Vicarage of Silkeston till both Houses of Parliament shall take further action concerning the same." — Journal, Vol. V., p. 516.

Of the same person, Calamy, an ecclesiastical historian, says:—

"Mr. John Spawford or Spofford was for many years Vicar of the church, which on account of its beautiful structure was called the Minster of the Moors.

"He was a pious man, of competent learning and ability, facetious in his conversation, and a lover of all good men.

"He was ejected for non-conformity about 1663, when Mr. Robert Cotton, a worthy, pious gentleman of the parish, took him to his house, where he died in 1668, aged 80 years."

NOTE 1. — Surttees Society, Vol. LXV., p. 26, Yorkshire Diaries Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries: Diary of Capt. Adam Eyre, 1647:—

"18, April. This morn I went to Cawthorne to church where I heard Mr. Broadley preach. I gave to Capt. Shirt a letter and a book from Mr. Bosvile. Then I went to dinner with Capt. Shirt, and after we went to Broadgate, and I spent 4*l.* and rid to Silkeston to hear Mr. Spofford preach, who labored mainly to uphold the excellency of the ministry in the people's opinion."

NOTE 2. — "The Rev. John Spofford, Vicar of Silkstone, from which he was ejected by the Act of Uniformity in 1662, when he was 74 years of age. The character given him by the biographer of the non-conforming clergy is that he was a pious man of competent parts and abilities, very plain in his speaking and holy in his life, facetious in discourse and a lover of all good men. 'His widow, Mistress Spawford, died in April, 1679, aged 94, in dotage, at John Hulme's, that married his daughter,' says Oliver Heywood."

NOTE 3. — Same volume, p. 256, John Hobson's diary : —

"19 July, 1726. Mr. Cockshut, Minister of Cawthorne, told me that an old man called — Turton, his parishioner, who died about seven years ago, who was clark at Silkston in the Civile Warr time, was present at the church when some soldiers came and forced him out, and obliged him to run unto Silkston fall to hide himself. He was ejected and — Spofforth who lied burried in Silkston Churchyard was put in his place."

The Vicarage of Silkeston, in the patronage of the Archbishop of York, is described as in the West Riding of Yorkshire, four miles west from Barnsley (which is fourteen miles north of Sheffield), the parish containing 13,728 inhabitants and comprising several townships. The church is dedicated to All Saints, and is the Mother Church of the Wapentake.

It must have been an important living at the time of the incumbency of John Spofford, and his convictions of duty were indeed strong in assuming an attitude which must inevitably lead to its loss, when the infirmities of age were already upon him.

The present Vicar (1888) is Rev. William Stafford Barker.

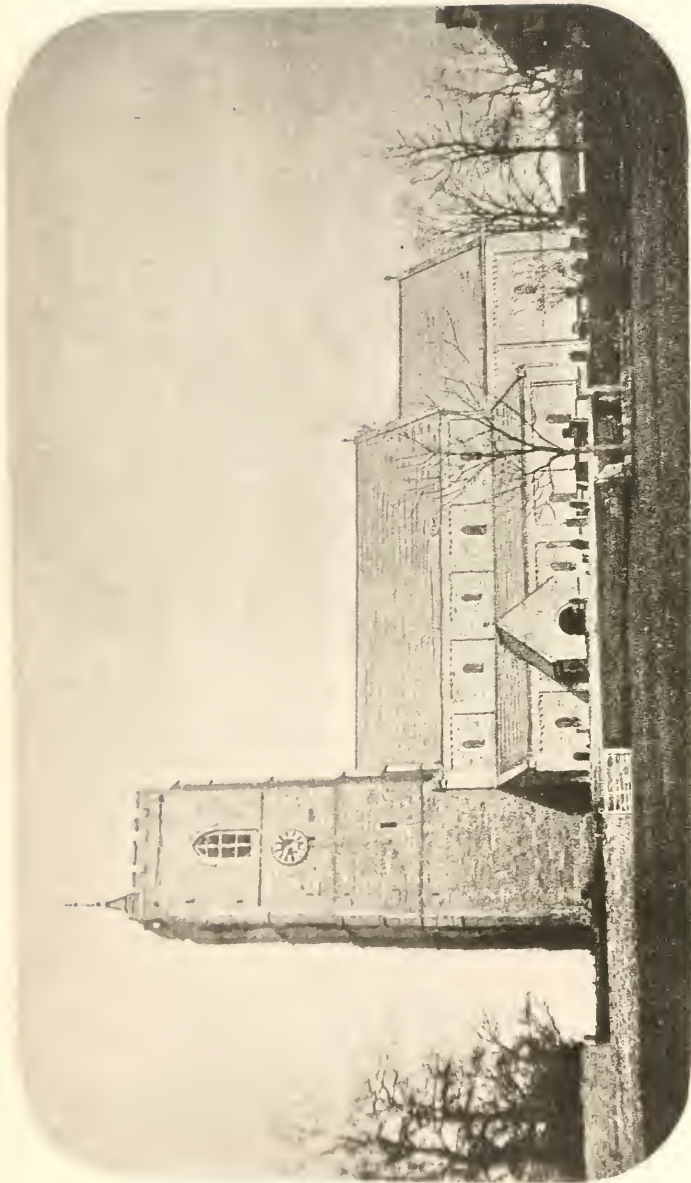

Of the history of the family in later years, Mr. Burke relates that "After the Revolution (1689) the family property was in Wistow Lordship, Turnhead House, and Barlby Manor, Yorkshire, and alliances were formed with the Fawkeses, Nixons, Lacys, Lodges, Listers, &c. They migrated to Howden, and have since intermarried with some of the most influential families of the district."

The town of Spofforth is about equidistant between Knaresborough and Wetherby. An interesting ruin still bears the name Spofforth Castle, and is the property of the second Lord Leconfield, whose father was the son of the third Earl of Egremont, an illegitimate descendant of the Percys.

Spofforth is, in ecclesiastical parlance, a rectory, ranking next above a vicarage, and below a deanery. The only incumbent of whom we have knowledge is Rev. James Tripp, "an earnest evangelical, ordained in 1810, and in middle life appointed to the beautiful living of Kirkby Overblow, in Yorkshire; and in 1847, to the great rectory of Spofforth, which he held till his death at the age of 93."

We quote from a history of Yorkshire : —

"Spofforth, or Spofford, is a small parish town three miles from Wetherby. Before the Conquest, Gamelbar de Spofford was lord of this manor, after which William de Percy had here four carucates of land, nine villains, and ten borders. William de Percy obtained a grant for a market here on Fridays in the year 1224, and in 1309 Henry de Percy procured a license to fortify his castle here. Henry de Percy, first Earl of Northumberland, was slain at Bramham Moor, within a few miles of this house, in 1407.

“After the battle of Towton, in 1461, so fatal to Henry VI., in which were slain the Earl of Northumberland and his brother, Richard Percy, their estates were laid waste and everything destroyed by the enraged conquerors.”

Leland says: “The manor house of Spofford was sore defaced in the time of the civil wars between Henry VII. and Edward IV., by the Earl of Warwick and the Marquis of Montecute. After lying in ruins some time, we find that the house was again made tenable, for in the year 1559, Henry, Lord Percy, obtained a license to fortify his houses of Spofford and Leckonfield.

“It is most probable that this mansion was last demolished in the time of Charles I., about 1635, as Samuel Ingoldsby, Esq., steward to the Duke of Northumberland, resided here in 1600.

“The present ruins extend forty-five yards from North to South, and sixteen from East to West. The situation is on a sloping bank ending in a low wall of rock within the Castle, affording convenience for lower apartments. The hall, which has been a most magnificent apartment, was seventy-five feet in length and thirty-six in breadth, and seems to have been built about the time of Edward III., when the idea of a castle began to give way to that of a palace.”

The following, though coming down from the Norman conquerors, commemorates our name, and gives a lively picture of the songs and revelry which once rang through the ancient castles and halls of England:—

“Lord Percy made a solemn feast
 In Spofford’s princely hall,
 And there came lords and there came knights,
 His chiefs and barons all.

“With wassail, mirth, and revelry,
 The castle rung around:
 Lord Percy called for song and harp,
 And pipes of martial sound.

“The minstrels of that noble house,
 All clad in robes of blue,
 With silver crescents on their arms,
 Attend in order due.

“The great achievements of that race
 They sung, their high command,
 How valiant Manfred o'er the seas
 First led his northern band.

“Brave Galfrid next, of Normandy,
 With vent'rous Rollo came,
 And from his Norman castle won,
 Assumed the Percy name.

“They sung how in the Conqueror's fleet
 Lord William shipped his powers;
 And gained a fair young Saxon bride,
 With all her lands and towers.”

Hargrave's History of Knaresboro, p. 295.

An English correspondent, Mr. Markham Spofforth, of London, communicates an item of interest concerning this ancient estate. Writing under date of May 11, 1870, while paying a visit at Eridge Castle in Sussex, the seat of the Earl of Abergavanny, who is the head of the family of Nevill, so famous in history, and a direct descendant of the Earl of Warwick, the king-maker, Mr. Spofforth says: “While looking over some old family papers with my host, we discovered that his own park at Eridge Castle and the park at Spofforth Castle were enclosed parks for deer at the time of the Domesday Survey, there being but few enclosed parks at that period. The park at Spofforth was done away with after the Norman Percys turned out Gamelbar de Spofforth and his family, but the Eridge park is as it was, the red and fallow deer with which it is abundantly stocked being as hereditary as the Nevills themselves.”

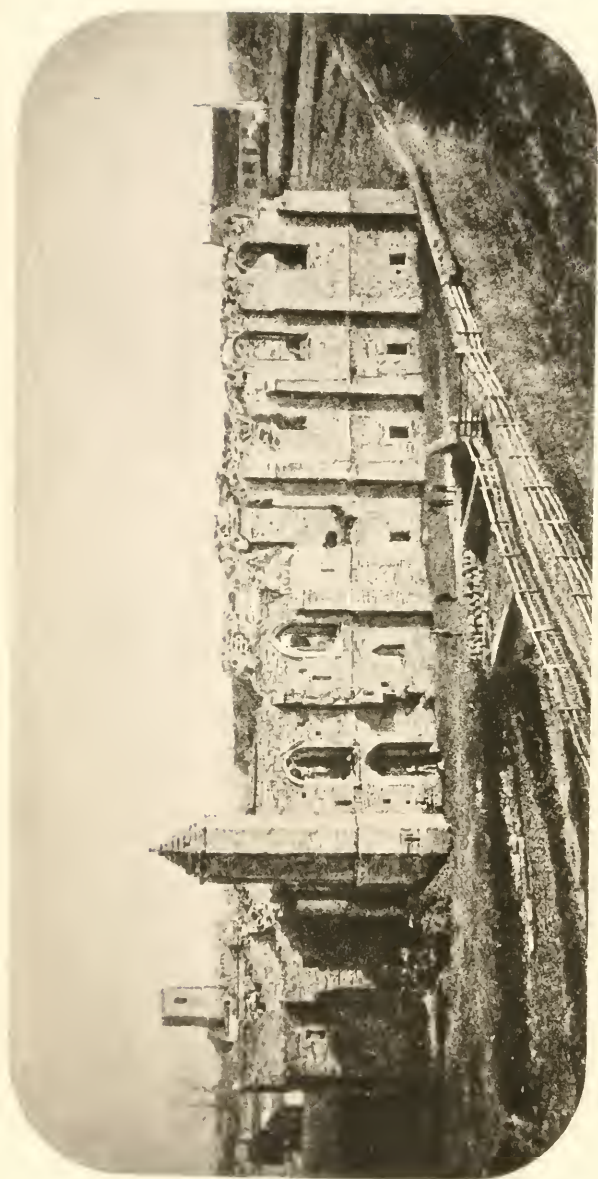

An American lady of Spofford descent, while on a recent European tour, writes thus of her impressions of this spot: “The photograph, which is familiar to many, gives a good representation of the ruin. The face which is there shown is the best part, the interior being but a crumbling mass of débris, and there was no friendly cousin to welcome me. The ivy, which was mixed with other blossoming vines when I saw it, reached to the top of the arched windows and over the tower at the left, the effect being very beautiful. I wished for some one interested to help me in my fancy pictures; but I was alone, my party having kindly consented to wait for me at York. I tried in vain to get information from people or books. One old gentleman was disposed to be very chatty, but he could tell me nothing except that the ruin was a fine one; but as I was convinced of that before, I did not consider that I had made much headway."

History informs us that Rev. Ezekiel Rogers,* with many families from Yorkshire, England, where he had been a laborious minister for seventeen years, emigrated to this country in 1638, and settled between Newbury and Ipswich in April, 1639; his grant extending from the seashore to Cochichawick, now Andover,† and was enlarged in 1640, to include the "neck on Merrimack river," as the settlers, about sixty families, were "straightened for land"; so, in addition to the present site of Rowley, Georgetown, and Boxford, the General Court granted in addition the territory now occupied by the towns of Bradford and Groveland.

We have no list of the names of this company, more than may be gathered from records of the division of lands, births, deaths, marriages, and those who held offices among them. This is doubtless owing to the burning of the house of Mr. Rogers, who would not have failed to record the names of the pioneers in so important an enterprise.

The name of John Spofford appears on the record of the first division of lands into homestead lots, in 1643. He had a house-lot of one and a half acres on Bradford Street, so called, near the centre of the present town of Rowley. Lots were also assigned him in the "fresh meadows, the salt meadows, the village lands, the Merrimack lands, and shares in the ox pasture, the cow pasture and the calf pasture." His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Scott, of Ipswich, but we find no record of their marriage. The birth of a daughter, Elizabeth, is recorded, Dec. 14, 1646.

He lived for about thirty years in what is still Rowley, and in the spring of 1669 removed to "Spofford's Hill" in the west part of the town, and was without doubt the first settler in Georgetown, and the progenitor of all of the name in the United States and Canada;* and also of most of the Harrimans and Brocklebanks, and many of the Nelsons, Chaplins, and Tenneys, of Georgetown; also many of the Kimballs, Haseltines, Hopkinsons, Parkers, Burbanks, and Woods, of Bradford and Groveland; and many of the Peabodys, Kimballs, and Adamases, of Boxford.

The town of Rowley, in 1668, laid out a farm "at the Gravelle Plain near the Bald Hills," to which, tradition says, the name of "Bald Pate" was given, the trees having been removed to clear the land for pasture; a use to which most of it has been devoted to the present day.

This farm John Spofford took on a lease for twenty-one years. For the first five years he was to pay as rent "three hundred feet of white oak plank, and after that time, ten pounds each year, one half in English corn at price current, or Indian corn, if he pleases, the other half in fat cattel or leane, at price current." This lease was assigned to his sons, John and Samuel, March 16, 1676, and the rent reduced to eight pounds, and to be wholly remitted "during the time of the Indian wars," and it was extended by agreement threescore years from the date thereof. John, Jr., was twenty years of age at the date of this lease, and he and his son John lived, reared families, and died on this farm before its expiration. Samuel, then twenty-four years of age; survived the lease nearly seven years.

Why this removal several miles into an almost unbroken wilderness was made, and this farm taken upon a lease, by John, Sr., when land was so plenty, and after having half a dozen lots assigned him in the division, does not appear; perhaps the "benefit of pen-

* This has sometimes been doubted, and the question raised if others of the name might not also have found here a home and left a posterity. While the records which have been received for insertion in this book almost without exception establish for themselves an unmistakable line of descent from John of Rowley in Essex County, Mass., it is true that two years prior to his advent, September, 1636, one William Spofferd was in the Colony, as a supercargo or commissioner for Sir Matthew Boynton, a man of great wealth, who advised those in his employ to remain in America, though ready to meet the expense of their return, if that was their choice. This appears in Vol. VII. of Massachusetts Historical Collections.

In the absence of any evidence to the contrary, it may be assumed that the aforesaid William Spofferd, who was probably not of the Yorkshire family, the work he was appointed to do being accomplished, returned to England, having no taste for a pioneer life and perchance no yearning for "a faith's pure shrine."

A letter is still preserved from one Samuel Spofforth to Robert Spofforth, of Howden, Yorkshire, England, dated Philadelphia, 1757, wherein the writer says: "I was born in Bermuda, where I now reside, and where I left a wife and five children in the month of August. I am now, by God's permission, bound there."

Surely neither of these persons is likely to have left descendants in this country.

ning the cattel" was a valuable privilege. His descendants were owners of nearly one thousand acres of adjoining lands, at the time the lease expired, when the farm reverted to the town. The northerly part of it was soon after set off to the Second Parish, and was sold or leased for nine hundred and ninety-nine years. The remaining part was let on seven-year leases, until 1851, when it was sold to Mr. Sewall Spofford, whose portrait appears elsewhere, and is at present (1888) owned by his son, Charles Sewall Spofford.

At the date of the first edition of this work it was not doubted that John Spofford spent the remainder of his days on this farm, but later research makes it highly probable that he returned to Rowley two years before his death, on the assignment of the farm to his sons, and the devising the lease of the "Prudence Cotton Farm" to his wife and youngest son.

This Prudence Cotton Farm was probably once owned by Dr. Anthony Crosby, the physician of Rowley, from 1652, and perhaps earlier, to the time of his death, about 1670. His widow, whose given name was Prudence, became the second wife of Rev. Seaborn Cotton, of Hampton, N. H., as related in Gage's History of Rowley, p. 390; and this marriage and removal may have opened the way for the lease of her farm in Rowley to John Spofford, Sr., and his return to the older settlement when he assigned to his sons the lease of the farm on "Spofford's Hill," in 1676. The theory that his death occurred at old Rowley is confirmed by the fact that his will, made shortly before his death, was witnessed by residents of that village, probably his neighbors at the time.

Mr. Gage, in his history of Rowley, mistakes the death of John Spofford, Jr., on the Rowley records in 1696, for that of the father, which occurred in 1678. The son survived eighteen years, and was buried at Bradford, while they worshipped with that church. John Spofford, Sr., being fifty years old in 1662, as we learn from an affidavit on file at Salem, was but sixty-six years of age at his decease, in 1678, in which year his will was entered at the probate office, "6th. 9th. month" (November, old style).

This will shows him to have been possessed of a competent share of worldly goods, and as we have so few records of this man, holding the important position of progenitor of all the Spoffords in America, we shall give it entire, as an ancient and authentic record of one of his last acts.

THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF JOHN SPOFARD, SENIOR.

I comit my soule into the hands of God who gave it, and my body to the earth, to be decently buried, and as to that estate which the Lord hath given, I dispose of it as follows after my debts are payd.

JOHN JOHNSON,
PHILIP NELSON.

In court held at Ipswich, 6th. 9th. month, 1678, this will proved to be the last will and testament of John Spaford, by the oaths of Philip Nelson and John Johnson.

The disposal of the lease at the new settlement to his older sons, and the provision that he makes for his wife and youngest son, then but thirteen years old, together with the request that he may be "useful to her in her husbandry work," indicate that he was expecting soon to leave them, and to this pious care he was probably admonished by failing health rather than by the infirmities of age.

The exact date of his death is not known, but it doubtless immediately preceded the presentation of his will at the probate office, Nov. 6 (old style, or 17, new style), 1678. His decease was four years before there was any organized church or any burying-ground in Bradford, and more than fifty years previous to the formation of the church in Georgetown, which leads us to the conclusion that he must have been buried at Rowley, though diligent search has failed to discover any stone marking the place of his rest.

His "loving wife" Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Scott, of Ipswich, merchant, must also have crossed the ocean, as she is known to have been the wife of John Spofford, only eleven years subsequent to the settlement of Ipswich, by newly arrived emigrants from England. We have no record of her death, but she was no doubt laid beside her husband in that hallowed ground which contains the dust of nearly all the first settlers of Rowley, where,

"Each in his narrow cell forever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep."

We may learn something of the character of the man of whom we write, from an anecdote, creditable to him and characteristic of the time in which he lived, which has been handed down by tradition from Samuel Spofford, who was born in 1653 and lived to be ninety-one years old, through a descendant born in the middle of the last century, and who related the story to the writer.

During his residence at Rowley, a severe drought was followed by a great scarcity of food, and our good forefather repaired to Salem to purchase corn for his family and neighbors. The merchant to whom he applied, foreseeing a greater scarcity and higher prices, refused to open his store to supply his want. Having pleaded the necessities of himself and others in vain, he cursed him to his face; but on being immediately taken before a magistrate, charged with profane swearing, he replied that he had not cursed profanely, but as a religious duty, and quoted Prov. xi. 26 as his authority. The words are, "He that withholdeth corn from the hungry, the people shall curse him." He was immediately acquitted, and by the summary power of courts in those days, the merchant was ordered to deliver to him as much corn as he wished to pay for.

John Spofford, 2d, as it appears, continued to live on the spot where the first house in Georgetown was built, and March 9, 1675, married Sarah Wheeler, of Rowley. He died,* leaving eight children, April 22, 1696, aged forty-nine; and his widow, four years subsequently, married Caleb Hopkinson, of Bradford, now Groveland. Her daughter Martha married Caleb Hopkinson, Jr., from whom the many families of the name in Groveland are descended. This Martha, after the death of her husband, who was known as Ensign Caleb Hopkinson, married Ebenezer Kimball, of Bradford, but lies buried beside the grave of her former husband, in the cemetery in Groveland.

Samuel, the third son of John the immigrant, is worthy of notice as the patriarch of a very numerous posterity, among whom are the many who during the last century removed to New Hampshire and Maine; and also as being a connecting link between the first and fourth generations, living as he did to the advanced age of ninety-one years. The legacies bequeathed by him to his children, prove him to have been a person of good estate, and it is quite evident that he was possessed of more than the ordinary amount of learning in his day. We have had the pleasure of seeing an account book kept by him, and in which he was wont to note down his family affairs, and which is now in the possession of one of his descendants, Mr. M. A. Stickney, of Salem, who also has in his keeping the wedding dress of his great-grandmother, a daughter of Samuel Spofford, the subject of this notice, and which is indeed an interesting relic, almost a century and a half having elapsed since the sun shone upon her bridal day. At the house of this daughter, Mrs. Stickney, of Byfield, the father spent his last days, and died Jan. 1, 1744, having sustained during his long life a connection with the old churches in Rowley, Bradford, and New Rowley.

John Spofford, 3d, from whom, with most of the families of the name in this vicinity, the author of this work descended, was born and spent his entire life upon the farm which was leased by the first settler. He seems to have been an industrious and thriving farmer, and in his will, made about two months previous to his death, in August, 1735, he confirms to his sons, Francis, John, and Abner, deeds of lands, — probably farms which he had already given them, — and makes ample provision for his wife and “our three little sons,” Daniel, Eliphalet, and William by name, children of a second wife, Sarah Poor.

Of these “three little sons,” it may be of interest to relate that William died in the army during the French and Indian wars; that Eliphalet was captain of a Rowley company attached to the regiment in command of his brother Daniel, which marched as far as Cambridge at the time of the Lexington fight, but failed to reach the scene of action till the affray was over. A son of Capt. Eliphalet, and the father of the writer, being absent when his regiment left, hastened home, equipped himself, and following on foot and alone, overtook the regiment at Topsfield.

Little value seems to have been placed upon the shares falling to the family of John Spofford, Sr., in the division of lands in the various parts of the town. He gives, as we have seen, to his son Francis “what may fall by virtue of any town grant,” and to Thomas “my village lands,” which, according to the meaning of these old records, refers to lands in the out-settlements. As we find no evidence that either of these persons left any posterity, the rights must have reverted to others of the family,* as John, 3d, in his will, authorizes his wife to “sell and dispose of out-skirts of land and meadows, and rights in new townships not yet settled, and of rights in any common, not yet divided, for the benefit of herself and little sons.” This will was made in the near prospect of death, as he says, in connection with several expressions of Christian faith and resignation. He, with his wife, Dorcas Hop-

* The following, culled from the Essex County, Massachusetts, Registry of Deeds, will be of interest, though it is hard to locate some of the persons whose names appear as heirs of John Spofford, Sr.: —

Elizabeth Low, of Andover, widow, conveys land in Rowley which belonged to her father, John Spofford, deceased, and also her interest in her brother Francis's estate. — Vol. LXVI., p. 53; date, April, 1724.

Cornelius Darling and wife Sarah, of Bellingham, Wm. Sprague and wife Hannah, of Mendon, convey all interest in estate of their grandfather, John Spofford, late of Rowley, deceased, and also in his son Francis's estate. Date, April, 1724. — Vol. LXVI., p. 56.

John Mitchell, of York, Mass. (now Maine), and Mary Mitchell, of Newbury, children of John Mitchell, of Newbury, deceased, convey their interest in the above-mentioned estates. — Vol. LXVI., p. 56.

Thomas Spafford, of Lebanon, Ct., conveys his interest in estate of Mary Hunnewell, in Westchester, N. Y., daughter of John Spofford, and of Francis Spofford, her brother. — Vol. LXVI., p. 56; date, 20 April, 1724.

John Spofford, Samuel Spofford, and Jonathan Spofford, of Rowley, husbandmen, and Joseph Kimball and Ebenezer Kimball, and his wife Martha, of Bradford, convey land in Rowley laid out to John Spofford, deceased. Date, Dec. 15, 1732. — Vol. LXIV., p. 159.

kinson, was admitted to the Bradford church, 11th, 3d month, 1702; and he united, together with his second wife, Sarah Poor, with the second Rowley church at its formation in 1732, and presided at the first parish meeting, Oct. 5, 1731. He died Oct. 4, 1735, and lies buried in the old cemetery in Georgetown.

There has long been a tradition that our family name originated in the word Spa, a spring of mineral water, and the ford is of course quite obvious. An English correspondent gives the same etymology of the words, and says, "The district in which Spofforth lies is a mineral one, and there are numerous mineral springs in the neighborhood."

The family name has varied much in its spelling, both in England and America. The English authorities are copied as printed. In the body of the before-mentioned lease, the name is twice spelled Spofforth, — it is signed Spofford, — but the renewed lease in 1676 is signed John and Samuel Spofforth. On the gravestone of this John, 2d, in the old burying-ground at Bradford, bearing the date 1697, it is spelled Spafford; and on the gravestone of Samuel, in the cemetery in Georgetown, it is Spaffard. The name was usually spelled with an a, at the time of the Revolution, and the descendants of those who left this vicinity at about that time retain this orthography; but Spofford is now nearly uniform in Massachusetts, and it is claimed conforms with the most ancient authorities in England.

It will be the plan of this work to spell the name of each family according to its own usage, though it is found that in the earlier generations the name of the same person is often written in many different ways.

Some confusion may arise to those unacquainted with the localities named, from the number of towns into which Rowley has been divided. The part of the town in which the family first settled is Rowley still, but we think no one of the name has lived there since the first settler left in 1669; while New Rowley, being the second parish in Rowley, now Georgetown, has sent out many sons and daughters to people distant places. Bradford was set off from Rowley in 1675. Georgetown in 1838, and Groveland from Bradford in 1850. There were in Georgetown in 1813 twelve families and twenty voters of the name, and nearly the same number may be found there at present. There are also a few families in Groveland and in Boxford, but by far the largest number of the descendants are scattered in different towns and States.

ABBREVIATIONS AND EXPLANATIONS.

b., born; bap., baptized; pub., published; m., married; s. p., without offspring; unm., unmarried; res., residence.

The star preceding a name indicates that it is to appear as the head of a family, in the next generation.

A number in parentheses, placed before the name of a head of a family, refers to that person's name in the preceding generation, as a member of his father's family. Lines of descent may thus be easily traced.

Rule lines separate the families into groups of cousins.

JOHN SPOFFORD and ELIZABETH SCOTT.

"She was of Ipswich and doubtless a daughter of Thomas Scott and his wife Elizabeth, who came over in the ship 'Elizabeth' in 1634, when nine years old. If so, she was thirteen years younger than her husband. This identity is confirmed by the repetition in her own family of the names of her parents, brothers, and sisters, Elizabeth, Thomas, Hannah, Sarah, Mary." — Savage's General Dictionary.

"Thomas and Elizabeth Scott, each 40 years of age, came in the 'Elizabeth' of Ipswich, Capt. William Andrews, the latter part of April, 1634, with their children, Elizabeth, 9 years old, Abigail, 7 years old, Thomas, 6 years old, and Isaac Mixer, 4 years old." (See Massachusetts Historical Collections, Third Series, Vol. X., p. 141.)

This Elizabeth Scott (mother of Mrs. John Spofford) subsequently married the Rev. Ezekiel Rogers (probably not the one who settled in Rowley, but a relative). She survived said Rogers, and was his widow in 1683.

John Spofford, as appears from an affidavit, was fifty years of age in 1662, hence born in 1612; his will was made Oct. 7, 1678, and probated 6th 9th month, 1678, his wife and son Thomas joint executors. For fuller notice, see Introduction, page 29.

¹ Inscription on gravestone, still legible, wherein the name is thus given:—

"CaPtEn JOHn SPaFFaRD."

In his captain's commission, bearing date May 8, 1721, and signed by Governor Samuel Shute, the name is spelled Spauford.

His will was admitted to probate Nov. 3, 1735.

It is related that from lack of devotional feeling, or want of confidence in the piety of her husband, — undoubtedly the latter, — she on at least one occasion continued her work while he was conducting family worship, and that, in making her the subject of one of his petitions, he very unhandsomely characterized her by an epithet quite inconsistent with conjugal tenderness.

Divers peccadilloes or eccentricities ascribed to him by tradition, — notably, taking a young son on a coveted excursion tightly tied in a bag, — leave to later generations scant room for doubt concerning which was the greater “sinner” of the two.

This pair are the progenitors of widely scattered and very important branches of the family, many representatives of which have become conspicuously eminent in political, financial, literary, and social life.

On the records of the church in Bradford is the following entry: "11th 3d month, 1702. John Spofford and his wife, Dorcas, were accepted as children of the church, and had their son baptized, named Francis."

(42.) CAPT. JOHN SPAFFORD and HANNAH TYLER.

Built in 1727 and occupied for ten years the house on "the hill," in Georgetown, Mass., in which the author of this work was born, removing thence to a settlement on Connecticut River, known as No. 4. — now Charlestown, N. H., — where he erected the first saw-mill and corn-mill by contract with a committee appointed by the proprietors. These were put in operation in 1744, but were burned April 19, 1746, by a party of Indians, who took Capt. Spafford, Lieut. Parker, and Stephen Farnsworth, prisoners, and carried them to Canada. Capt. Spafford returned Aug. 16, 1747, and petitioned the government of Massachusetts for aid, — his house burned, his lands damaged, his family numerous. The mills were destroyed again, and rebuilt in 1757, and were resorted to by the new settlers as far north as Lancaster, one hundred and twenty-four miles.

Names of persons who visited them are preserved, among them Capt. David Page, first settler of Lancaster. A visit of Gen. Bailey is thus related: —

“General Bailey, of Newbury town,
To old No. 4, to mill came down;
Good Captain Spafford — God rest his soul —
Ground his grist, but would take no toll.”

Captain Spafford was a most useful citizen, one of the ten male members who formed Rev. Bulkley Olcott's church; twice elected to office of selectman.

(47.) - COL. DANIEL SPOFFORD and JUDITH FOLLANSBEE.

A daughter of Francis and Judith (Moody) Follansbee, of Newbury. Married 1741; settled in Rowley, Mass., now Georgetown. He built and occupied for a long time the house owned by the late Sewall Spofford, near the "old farm." He was colonel of the Seventh Regiment of militia in Essex County, which marched to Cambridge, at the time of the Lexington fight, failing to arrive in season to take part in the engagement; representative of the town, 1776; member of the convention which formed the constitution in 1780; and was elected deacon of the church in Georgetown in 1781. He built several churches, and his skill as an architect may be judged of by the way in which he effected the enlargement of the meeting-house formerly occupied by the Congregational Society in Peabody. The building was cut in two crosswise, the ends moved apart, making room for two rows of new pews. Upon the still greater increase of the society, his services were again required to enlarge their borders, which he did by dividing the building lengthwise, and making two rows of pews with a broad aisle through its whole length. In this meeting-house the writer remembers attending religious service about A. D. 1800. It was a large unpainted structure, with many windows of unequal size, and stood upon the site now occupied by the present Congregational Church.

Judith (Follansbee) Spofford having died Feb. 28, 1799, aged 59, Colonel Spofford married Mrs. Betsey Emery, daughter of Capt. James Smith, of West Newbury, who died May 11, 1784, aged 47. She was one of a family of ten children living to maturity, the young ladies being specially noted for beauty and grace. A third wife was the widow of Rev. David Jewett, whose maiden name was Phebe Thurston, she having four Jewett children, Phebe, Eunice, David, and John. Col. Spofford died April 26, 1803.

(48.) CAPT. ELIPHALET SPOFFORD and LUCY PEABODY.¹

Her birth is thus recorded in Boxford: "Lowecy Dafter of Nathan and Priscilla Peabody born Sept. 24, 1728." The marriage occurred Dec. 11, 1748, and they lived in the house on "the hill" in Georgetown, built in 1727 by the redoubtable Capt. John Spafford, who became one of the first settlers of Charlestown, N. H.,—the house near the locality known in modern local nomenclature as The Bush. The wife, Lucy Peabody, having died May 28, 1766, Capt. Spofford married Apphia Spofford, who, after his decease, married Deacon Asa Parker, of Andover, March 1, 1781, and was an excellent mother-in-law of two families. Capt. Spofford died of fever, Oct. 7, 1776, in the very beginning of the Revolutionary struggle; "scared to death," according to his son-in-law, Jonathan Hale, who was noted for grotesque conceits and erratic ways, as was Capt. Spofford for sterling character and military faithfulness. His commission, signed by Governor Francis Bernard, was dated June 8, 1767. The inventory of his estate is given at £1,550 16s. 2d.

¹ Lucy Peabody was daughter of Deacon Nathan Peabody, of Boxford, who was a son of John Peabody, who was the son of Francis Peabody, of Topsfield; born at St. Albans, Hertfordshire, England, in 1614, and married Mary Foster, daughter of Reginald Foster, of whom honorable mention is made by Scott, in "Marmion" and the "Lay of the Last Minstrel." The family came over in the ship "Planter," in 1635. The father, John, settled in Duxbury. Francis was an original settler of Hampton, to which place he went with Mr. Batchelder, from Lynn, in 1638. He was in Topsfield in 1659, and was a large landholder in that town and in Boxford.

Her mother was Priscilla Capen, daughter of Rev. Joseph Capen, forty years minister of Topsfield. Mrs. Capen was Priscilla, daughter of Capt. John Appleton, of Ipswich, whose wife, Priscilla, was daughter of Rev. Jose Glover, minister of Sutton, Surrey, England. He preached some time in London, but embarked with his family for America in 1638, with Stephen Day, a printing press, and three men servants, who were bound to work for Mr. Glover three years. He died on the passage, but Day set up the press, which is supposed to have been the first in North America. He had a daughter, Sarah, who married a son of Governor Winthrop, and two sons. He owned a house, garden, and three acres of land in Boston. His widow married President Dunster, of Harvard College.

(61.) MOSES SPAFFORD and ——— ———.

He was one of the pioneer settlers of Claremont, N. H. Though the bride's name is unknown, the following story of the marriage ceremony will be of interest:

"Rev. Bulkley Olcott was established in Charlestown, N. H., before the settlement of the townships on the north and west, and he was often called to attend weddings and funerals at a great distance. In such cases guides were sent to conduct him to the places and return with him, as there were no roads, and he would be in danger of being lost in the intricacies of the forest. There is a tradition that he was thus conducted to solemnize the first marriage in Claremont.

"Moses Spafford had built a log-house, and brought to it his intended. It was a very rude structure, with a stationary pine table and no furniture but such as Moses had made, and the utensils for housekeeping were not many or elegant, yet with the superadded idea that Moses was to be her constant companion, all was pronounced very good, and Moses went to Charlestown to bring up Mr. Olcott to perform the marriage service. When about starting, the lady reminded him that they had nothing to drink in the house, and that as Mr. Olcott might be faint on his arrival, it might be well to take a bottle and get a pint at Charlestown. This was done, and Mr. Olcott on his arrival was treated to a generous glass of black-strap. He then solemnized the marriage, and after refreshments, was reconducted to his home. The earliest issue of this marriage was the first white child born in Claremont, to which the parents gave the good old name of Elijah."—Saunderson's History of Charlestown, No. 4.

Benjamin Spofford married a second wife, with whom he lived fifty years, who was the widow, first, of David Barnard, of Watertown, Mass., who died in 1775; and then of Hon. David Wood, of Boxford, Mass., her acquaintance with whom was formed while he was a member of the General Court, then in session in Watertown. She was a daughter of Phineas Warren, of Waltham, a woman of strong mind and massive physique.

A characteristic incident of her early life, as related by herself, was transcribed by her grandson, Benjamin S. Barnes, of Boxford, who kindly permits its use here:—

“The day of the battle of Lexington, I was living in Watertown. The able-bodied men had all gone to the battle, leaving only women, children, and a few old men, at home, anxiously awaiting the result. Toward night several women came running to my house, crying, ‘Mrs. Barnard, the Regulars are coming!’ I looked up the street, and saw a redcoat riding toward us on a horse. He came up and inquired if that was the road to Boston. I stepped to his side, took the horse by the head with one hand, and the soldier by the collar with the other, saying, ‘You villain; you’ve been killing our folks, and deserve death yourself’ (my husband and five brothers had gone to the fight). I pulled him to the ground, while he begged piteously for his life. I then gave him up to some old men, who took him to the tavern and kept him till the proper authorities had him exchanged for one of our men. It was asserted that he was wounded, and was trying to find his way to Boston, having stolen the horse from the roadside, where it had been tied by its owner, Col. Stedman, of Cambridge, who had ridden him to Lexington that morning, whither he had gone to fight for his country. He was made glad, a few days after, by the recovery of his valuable horse.”

Benjamin Spofford died Feb. 19, 1836. Lydia, his wife, died Sept. 6, 1839, aged 95.

"Though his last illness was very severe, he was never heard to utter a complaint; and in the last struggle of expiring nature, blest with full reason, he was favored with a calm and easy exit from time. His remains were interred upon his own farm, the spot being selected by himself on the border of Black River. He was a native of Salisbury, Conn., and one of the first settlers of Tinmouth, Vt. Blest with a sound understanding, great firmness of purpose, and a character for integrity, he was soon called to stations of trust and responsibility. When the contests about State sovereignty were merged in a national one for independence, he took the field against foes and traitors, at the head of a fine company of militia, rendering important services in the taking of Ticonderoga, Crown Point, and in the battle of Bennington. He was with his company under Allen and Arnold in the taking of Ticonderoga, in 1775, and was by them directed to join in the expedition under Colonel Warner against Crown Point; but he reached that important post before Colonel Warner, and received himself the sword of the commandant, which is still in Col. Spafford's family." Mary Baldwin, his wife, was born April 20, 1750; died Sept. 9, 1842; interred in the West Street Cemetery, Rutland, Vt.

RICHARD S. SPOFFORD, M. D.
NEWBURYPORT, MASS.

(400.) DR. RICHARD S. SPOFFORD and MRS. FRANCES M. LORD.

"Dr. Spofford fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, and entered Harvard in the class which graduated 1812. While in college he was pre-eminent as a mathematical scholar, carrying off the 'Great Slate,' which in those days was accorded to the best mathematician of the class, passing from hand to hand as a college heirloom. The contest in this case was between himself and the late learned Judge Peleg Sprague.

"Dr. Spofford pursued the studies of his profession with his father and with his brother, finishing his course at the Philadelphia College. On receiving his diploma, he joined his brother in practice at Rowley, but in 1816 he removed to Newburyport, where he remained in active practice for more than fifty years, having withdrawn therefrom only a few years before his death.

"To speak of Dr. Spofford's skill and attainments in his profession is simply to rehearse a universally admitted fact while he was living,—one which will long have a traditional verification in all the country-side where his arduous practice lay, including Newburyport and all the adjacent towns. Called often in consultation with other leading physicians of the metropolis and of other States, and having had the care of many illustrious patients, there was that just appreciation of his wisdom and learning, of his zeal and fidelity, his quick perceptions and intuitive resolutions, which made his name known and respected far beyond the local limits of his professional arena. Always a student and lover of scientific inquiry, he brought to the augmentation of his efficiency as a physician great knowledge in all the departments of natural science, a mind balanced with that equipoise derived from mathematical studies and the tender feelings of his sympathetic nature."

"He was a very active citizen; personally never moved by political aspirations; friend, admirer, and enthusiastic supporter of Caleb Cushing; coöperated with Mr. Wm. Bartlett in introducing cotton manufacture into Newburyport, acting as one of the building committee and directors of the Bartlett Mills; member and one of the founders of the Merrimack Humane Society. For a number of years he was one of the overseers of Harvard University."

Dr. Spofford died in Newburyport, Jan. 19, 1872, aged nearly 85, and was interred with Masonic honors, having attained the highest degrees of that Order.

"Mrs. Frances Maria Spofford was born in Plymouth, England, in the year 1801. Her father was John Mills, the poet and actor, a Scotchman, whose family in several branches had won dramatic and artistic eminence. Mr. Mills was an immediate descendant of Christopher Kilby, long the agent of the colony of Massachusetts and of the city of Boston at the court of Great Britain, and for whom, in acknowledgment of his liberal donation at the time of a conflagration, Kilby Street was named; another descendant in the same generation being the seventh Duchess of Argyl. That Dalrymple, who was the friend and patron of Burns, was the first husband of Mrs. Spofford's grandmother, and her grandmother's near relative was the wife of James Otis, the patriot. Her mother was the daughter of James Mothershead Errington, and the only surviving relatives of this connection are the family of which Frances Eleanor Trollope, the wife of T. Adolphus Trollope, is a distinguished member. Orphaned in childhood, she became the adopted daughter of Mrs. Susannah Rawson, the author of "Charlotte Temple" and several other prominent works of our earlier literature, and at whose famous school many of the leading women of the past generations received a superior education; a school to whose management Mrs. Spofford succeeded, although but for a brief season, as she married, at an early age, Mr. George Lord, a brother of the wife of Rev. John Pierpont, the poet, by whom she bore one child, Mrs. Georgiana Hall, a contributor to our current literature. In her early days Mrs. Spofford was of rare personal beauty, and throughout her life she retained a remarkable dignity and grace of manner."

1152. *RICHARD S., b. July 30, 1833; m. Harriet E. Prescott.
 1153. FRANCES E., b. June 13, 1835.
 1154. GEORGE M., b. July 16, 1840; d. Dec. 11, 1845.

(401.) SEWALL SPOFFORD and ELIZABETH NELSON.

Married May 21, 1818. She was a daughter of Nathaniel and Sally (Chaplin) Nelson; she died July 2, 1828. He built the house formerly occupied by Harrison Spofford, removing thence to the one long occupied by Col. Daniel Spofford; purchased in 1850 the "old farm," which had been leased by the town or first parish of Rowley a hundred and fifty years. The early life of Sewall Spofford was spent in agricultural pursuits, a few weeks at the district school in winter comprising all his early educational advantages.

In middle life he was engaged in the business of road building in various parts of the county of Essex, the county commissioners being frequently called to lay out new highways previous to the advent of railroads.

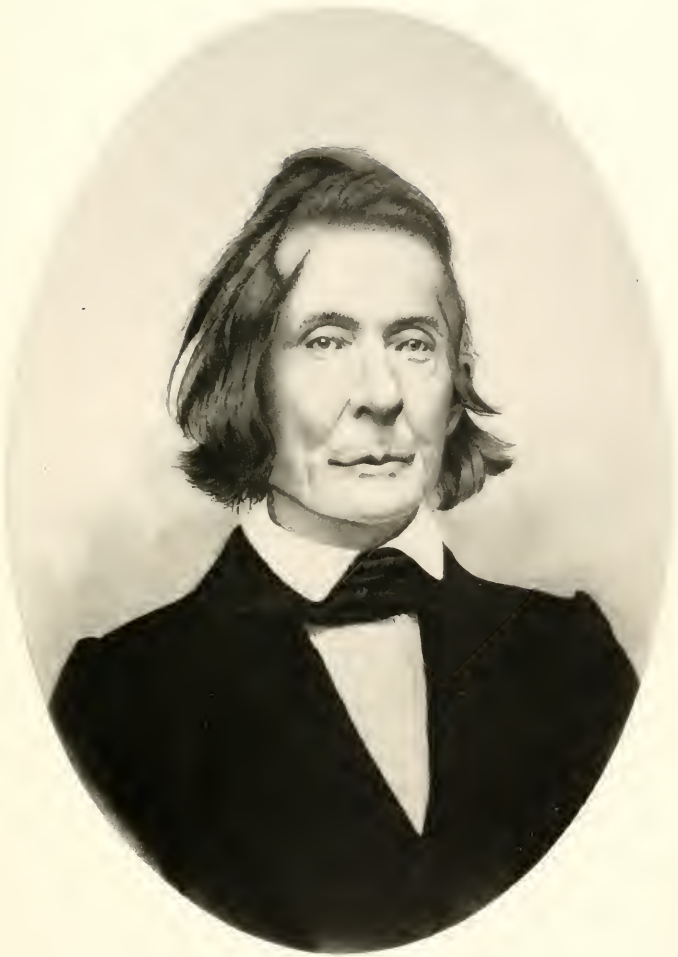

He always manifested much interest in public affairs, took a prominent part in procuring the act of incorporation of the town of Georgetown, and served on its early boards of selectmen and assessors.

He was a natural mechanic, and took a lively interest in all new inventions, being the first man in his native town to use a cast-iron plough.

In politics he was a Whig of the stanchest kind. He believed in a high protective tariff and the consequent development of home industries and home markets, but he was not an original abolitionist, or a believer in Charles Sumner, until after the Brooks assault; that affair demonstrated to his mind that slavery and freedom could n't live together, and if either must die, slavery should go to the wall; consequently, he ever after acted with the Republican party.

In early life he espoused the cause of Freemasonry, and bore aloft its sacred emblems throughout the darkest days of its New England history. He took the Royal Arch degrees, and was buried with Masonic honors by the Haverhill Pentucket Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, Nov. 6, 1865.

The latter part of his life was devoted exclusively to the business of farming, and his purchase of the Parish Farm on which the residence of John Spofford, the first representative of the family in America, was located, has more particularly identified his name with the history of the Spofford family.

(506.) SARAH McALLASTER and JAMES McLAUGHLIN.

Married and settled in Bedford, N. H. Parental opposition early troubled the course of true love in this case, resulting in estrangement and the betrothal of the fair lady (she was very fair) to another. While a merry quilting party was in progress in furtherance of the preparations for a speedy marriage, the mystical "last stitch" being contended for, the discarded lover arrived after long absence, and, smiting the work with his riding-whip, exclaimed, "John Goffe shall never sleep under that quilt!" The prospective bride was easily brought to the same determination, and hence the name of James McLaughlin appears above. They removed to Niagara, Upper Canada, now Province of Ontario, where she died 1794. Her husband served in the War of 1812, and died at the house of his son William, in Bloomfield, N. Y., Feb. 20, 1821.

¹ The marked eminence of Commodore Belknap as a naval officer demands special notice here. Born in Newport, N. H., Jan. 22, 1832, at the age of 15 he entered the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., graduating June, 1854. During the war he became executive officer of the "New Ironsides," in which he took part in twenty-seven engagements, and after the capture of Fort Fisher, proceeding to Charleston, he was present at its evacuation, firing the last hostile shot at its defences. July, 1866, he was assigned to the command of the flag-ship "Hartford," of the Asiatic Squadron, and participated in the ceremonies incident to the opening of the new treaty ports of Japan. Later, while commanding the "Tuscarora," he did most valuable work in deep-sea soundings, perfected appliances already in use, and obtained, with piano-forte wire, soundings off the coast of Japan, at the extraordinary depth of 4,655 fathoms, or more than five and a quarter statute miles. Being the senior officer at the Hawaiian Islands when, in 1874, the election of David Kalakaua as king resulted in riot, Commander Belknap landed blue-jackets and marines from the "Tuscarora" and "Portsmouth," restored order, and, at the request of the king, occupied the town six days. He was commissioned as captain, 1875, promoted to rank of commodore, June 2, 1885, being ordered to the Naval Observatory at Washington, D. C., from whence he was removed to the command of the navy-yard at Mare Island, California.

“Paul Spofford remained on his father’s farm, assisting in its cultivation until the age of eighteen, when he entered the store of A. M. Hatch in Haverhill, Mass., where, with the exception of a short stay in Salem, N. H., he was clerk and junior partner until 1818. He then formed a partnership with his friend, Thomas Tileston, at that time editor of the Haverhill Gazette, and went to New York to establish a commission business. It was a partnership that continued without change until Mr. Tileston’s death, forty-six years afterwards. Mr. Tileston was a high-minded man, of great intelligence and ability, blessed with a family in all respects worthy of him. The very great intimacy between the two partners and their families, who during this whole period occupied adjoining houses, was much commented on. These harmonious relations contributed much to the success of the firm.

“In a year or two their agency of the Boston packets, and their Spanish trade with the West Indies and South America, led them into a shipping business, which soon became very large. Their flag, yellow, a blue cross, the letters S T white, was in time well known in the four quarters of the globe. They did a large banking business, were large importers of West India and South American produce, and were heavily engaged in trade with Europe and all parts of the United States.

“Spofford & Tileston were the first to inaugurate in this country successful ocean steam navigation. Others had made sporadic attempts on our coast, but disastrous, because with light boats not fit for heavy weather. It was supposed that we could not build marine engines in the United States. They showed, when they built the steamship ‘Southerner,’ and put her on the Charleston route, under Capt. Michael Berry, that American skill could build steamships equal to any in the world. Collins, Vanderbilt, Law, Aspinwall, and others soon followed with their splendid steamships, and for a time it seemed as if the supremacy would pass from England.

“During the Civil War Spofford & Tileston were firm adherents of the North, and aided largely with their means and counsel. Some of their steamers entered government service. They armed the others and obtained commissions in the navy for the captains. As for their sailing ships, they trusted to the prudence of their commanders. One of their steamers, the ‘Nashville,’ was seized by the Confederates, and as a privateer did much mischief. All their other vessels escaped harm, though they had refused to yield to the temptation to put them under a foreign flag. It was a great gratification that during their long career as steamship owners, none met with disaster, nor was there ever any loss of life by accident.

"In 1864, Mr. Spofford lost by death this friend and partner of half a century, but he bore up manfully under the blow, and continued in active business until his own death, five years later — Oct. 28, 1869.

"Mr. Spofford was director in numerous banks, railroads, and insurance and other companies, and was for many years treasurer and member of the council of the New York University.

"He was a very active man, full of life and energy, of lithe, spare form, of dark complexion, very bright black eyes, beautiful silky hair clustering in natural curls, black as jet, until age began to tinge it gray. He always enjoyed excellent health, the result of a good constitution and a prudent life, free from excess of any kind; it stood him in good stead in 1858, when, suffering from a fearful blow on the head, caused by accident, it seemed for many weeks almost impossible to save him. He was a man of very deep feelings, a devoted husband and father, and very kind and considerate to those under him. There never was the slightest appearance of that haughtiness and assumption which great success begets in some men. On the contrary, he was modest and retiring in demeanor. Though somewhat slow of speech, he was very witty and quick at repartee. When a lad he excelled in riding, shooting, skating, and wrestling; but in manhood, business so completely occupied his attention that he gave them up entirely, except that he and Mr. Tileston always having good horses, would generally ride out together on pleasant afternoons.

"In the early part of this period he had a splendid sorrel, a most beautiful horse, full of fire and life, with arching neck, expressive eyes, a long tail sweeping the ground and most gracefully carried. No one but Mr. Spofford could ride him. He understood all his ways. It needed great care and quickness to mount him. Then the horse, after cuvetting, prancing sideways, and rearing so he would almost fall backwards, and by these actions having greatly delighted all the urchins in the street, would suddenly break into a gallop, and yielding to the kind but firm treatment of his master, comport himself in a proper manner during the ride. He was perfectly fearless, and portrayed most vividly the war-horse so powerfully described in the Book of Job. The poor horse came to a bad end. In struggling with his groom, while he managed to throw him, he broke his own leg. Mr. Spofford mourned greatly for him, and was never afterwards in saddle, but contented himself with good driving horses.

"In those days (1825-50) New York was far below its present colossal size. The Bloomingdale road and Third Avenue afforded many miles of pleasant drives, where now there are only stone-paved streets and solid blocks of buildings.

"When he landed in New York, green fields began at Canal Street, less than a mile from the Battery, and it was a most picturesque commingling of hills, and woods, and rocks, and glens, and grassy dells — a scenery far surpassing in natural beauty the far-famed Central Park. Almost every turn of the roads gave enchanting views of the Hudson and East Rivers, their banks enlivened with charming country residences. At that time there was no gas; the streets were dimly lighted with oil. There were no stoves nor ranges; all cooking was with wood. There was no Croton. For household purposes water was brought by the servants from pumps in the streets or from cisterns in the yards. Many families bought 'spring water' by the pail, brought to them in carts that made a daily round. There were no railroads, no steamships, and but very few and very slow steamboats. It was long before the telegraph, photography, and other wonderful inventions of this nineteenth century, now so common that we can hardly realize how we would get on without them. Chicago, Kansas City, San Francisco, were not even dreamed of. But why enlarge on what is patent to every one who gives the subject a moment's thought?

"In the life of so prominent a citizen, amid such changes, there are many incidents which would be of interest, but this outline must suffice."

"He was a good rider, and no one knows how it happened, only that an hour after he had left the house in the full flush of health, he was picked up on the Boulevard and brought home. As the groom lifted him from the wagon he partially revived, and murmured, "I don't know how it happened"; then he became unconscious until his death a week afterwards. He was universally beloved and respected, as near faultless as man can be. He was a fine-looking young man, a great favorite in society, of quiet, refined tastes, fond of music, painting, and scientific pursuits. His mind seemed to dwell on improvements, and had he lived, doubtless he would have distinguished himself as an inventor."

Y., make a clearing, build a log-house, and put in a crop of grain. He made the journey of a hundred miles on foot, carrying his axe and a small pack on his back, and having but one dollar in his pocket. He accomplished his arduous mission,—his parents and their other children joining him the following autumn,—a marked instance of skill and intrepidity in one so young. His strong physique, great powers of endurance, deep piety, and sterling qualities eminently fitted him for his work in the gospel ministry, which extended from his ordination, in 1823, to his death, July 4, 1867, he being at that time pastor of a Baptist church in Unadilla, N. (957.) JUDGE HENRY M. SPOFFORD and OPHELIA MARTIN.

The following outline of Judge Spofford's exceptionally brilliant career is an abstract of an extended and highly appreciative biographical sketch published in the New Orleans Picayune: —

“Judge Spofford was born at Gilmanton, N. H., in 1821, and graduated with the highest honors, at the age of 19, in 1840, at Amherst College, Massachusetts. On account of his high standing as a scholar, he was appointed a member of the Faculty of the college from 1840 to 1842. In the latter year he emigrated to Louisiana and taught school in Claiborne Parish, studying law in the mean time with great assiduity until 1845, when he was admitted to the bar, and, removing to Shreveport, Caddo Parish, formed a partnership with Judge Allcott and opened an office for practice.

“At the same time the two young members of the firm set to work at the preparation of a book entitled the ‘Louisiana Magistrate,’ which embraced a thorough compilation of all the laws and decisions relating to the jurisdiction, the powers and duties of magistrates. This publication proved a great addition to our law literature, and several editions of it have met with ready sale and demand.

“After nine years of practice in Caddo and the adjoining parishes, during which he made most impressive appearances before courts and popular assemblies, and in contributions to the law journals of the day, Judge Spofford was elected to the vacancy of Justice J. G. Campbell in our Supreme Court.

“He had then barely entered his thirty-third year, and though manifesting a proper modesty in his succession to so many older and more eminent predecessors in his office, he did not fail to impress the bar and his colleagues with a high idea of his ability as a judge and jurist.

“The chief justice of the court of which he was an associate, Judge Merrick, happily described the character of his utterances on the bench as evincing a comprehensive grasp of a judicial subject in a style and manner both elegant and pleasing. His elocution was so perfect that the reading of his opinions possessed a charm that cannot easily be forgotten. Judge Merrick further added in his address to the Supreme Court: —

“‘Judge Spofford fully appreciated the value of rugged labor in legal pursuits and the preparation of judicial opinions, and he used to liken the task of legal investigation to the labors of the anvil and the mine. As a lawyer he was courteous, capable, honorable, and upright; as a man and gentleman his conduct was above reproach.’

“Of his decorum on the supreme bench the chief justice said: —

“‘The opinions delivered by him in many important cases of public interest, and particularly in the celebrated case of Bell v. Hufty, Eleventh Annual, are still fresh in the memory of his contemporaries and of all students, in which questions of constitutional, political, and statutory law were involved, and will remain lasting monuments to his ability, learning, wisdom, integrity, and elevated character as a constitutional lawyer and as a dispenser of human justice among his fellow-beings. His name belongs to the judicial history of the State, and will be transmitted to posterity with the annals of our jurisprudence.’

“Returning to the bar, and opening an office in this city, Judge Spofford soon engaged with great vigor and activity in a large practice. Meantime he had made a happy and brilliant marriage. The lady who became his wife was not only highly endowed with personal and intellectual charms and elegant accomplishments, but was also the heiress of one of the richest landholders and capitalists in Tennessee. This gentleman, Col. Martin, of Pulaski, was greatly aided in the administration of his large estate by his son-in-law, and manifested his appreciation of his services by a large legacy to him.

“Judge Spofford withdrew for two years from practice in this city, and took up a temporary residence at Pulaski, when, under the obligation he had assumed to Mr. Martin, he gave his whole attention and labor to the settlement of the large estate of the deceased.

“This settlement proved a most successful one, to the great enrichment of the heirs. Never having abandoned his domicile in Louisiana, he returned to the city, and was about to resume his practice, when the earnest demand of the Democratic party drew him into the political field as a contestant for the senatorship. This was in 1876, when the Nicholls Legislature had been organized and was in full possession of the government of Louisiana. For this position Judge Spofford was nominated, and elected by a large majority. His title to the senatorial seat was opposed in the Senate by William Pitt Kellogg, who held a commission under the Legislature which had been displaced by the assembly which had organized under the governorship of Gov. Nicholls. The radical party then dominating in the Senate, after a long investigation and discussion by a committee, yielded to party demands and considerations, and against all truth, justice, and law, rejected Judge Spofford’s claim. This contest imposed upon Judge Spofford an enormous amount of labor and expense at a time when his health had begun to fail. Repairing to a sanitary resort in the mountains of Virginia, a fatal disease, from which he had long suffered, developed with such potency, that before his family could reach him he departed this life on the 21st of August, 1880. His remains were taken to Pulaski, where his wife and family then were, and were deposited in the family cemetery of the Martins, with manifestations of the deep sorrow of the whole population, by all of whom he was greatly respected and honored.”

and when about to enter college, his health failing, he migrated to Cincinnati, Ohio, becoming a bookseller and publisher. In 1859, he became associate editor of the Cincinnati Daily Commercial, and in 1861 was appointed first assistant librarian in the Library of Congress at Washington, becoming librarian-in-chief in 1864. During his administration of this responsible trust, the National Library has grown from 70,000 to upwards of 600,000 volumes; and the change in the law of copyright, effected in 1870, has made the office of the librarian an onerous and important one, all American copyrights being issued from his office, and all copyright publications being required by law to be deposited in the Congressional Library.

"Mr. Spofford has written largely for the periodical press, on historical, economic, and literary topics, and is widely known as a librarian for comprehensive knowledge of books and their contents. He has published Catalogues of the Library of Congress; "The American Almanac and Treasury of Facts," an annual compiled by him from official sources (1878-88); the "Library of Choice Literature" (ten volumes, 1881-88); the "Library of Wit and Humor" (five volumes, 1884); "Manual of Parliamentary Rules" (1884), etc. He is a member of many historical and philosophical societies, and received the degree of LL. D. from Amherst College in 1884."

Gen. Spofford entered the United States service in February, 1862, as lieutenant-colonel of the 97th New York Regiment; commissioned colonel, Jan. 20, 1865. An unusual amount of active service fell to his share, and the battles of Cedar Mountain, second Bull Run, South Mountain, Antietam, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, and Gettysburg gave full scope to the military skill and personal bravery for which he distinguished himself. In the last-named engagement he led several charges in person, almost miraculously escaping death; having his horse shot under him and his clothing pierced by bullets. At Macon, Ga., in Libby Prison, and while under fire of the Union guns at Charleston, he had sixteen months' experience in the horrors of prison life; all of which perils he survived, to see the surrender of Lee, and the close of the Rebellion, to be made brigadier-general by brevet, and to wear for many years his well-earned laurels.

Col. Spofford entered the United States service in 1861, as the captain of a company recruited by him for the 11th Regiment, Maine Volunteers. He was in the whole of the Peninsular campaign, and was highly complimented by his superior officers for his fidelity and bravery. In the fall of 1862, he was commissioned major, and in November, 1863, was further promoted to lieutenant-colonel, and as such had command of the regiment for nearly a year previous to his death. He died at Fortress Monroe, June 17, 1864, from wounds received at Bermuda Hundred, June 2.

His brother officers held him in the highest esteem. Col. Plaisted said of him; "Col. Spofford won his promotion by the zeal and faithfulness with which he performed every duty. He entered the service of his country from the highest motives, ready and willing to give his life, if need be, for his country's cause. Our country has lost a brave and faithful soldier and a Christian patriot."

(1581.) AMOS CATLIN SPAFFORD and ELIZABETH B. WHITE.

Married March 25, 1850; residence, Rockford, Ill. Mrs. Spafford is a native of Peterboro, N. H.

Amos Catlin Spafford was born in Adams, Jefferson County, N. Y., Sept. 14, 1824. His father was Dr. John Spafford, a physician of ability and a man very much loved by the people through the wide section of country in which he practised. He died in 1827, leaving the care of the children to the mother. She was a woman of strong character, and in spite of delicate health she managed her boys with wisdom tempered with love, and although she survived her husband but six years, she had made such an impression on the character of her son that it influenced all his after life.

After the death of his mother, he spent two years at the village school and two years at the Black River Institute of Watertown, N. Y., and one year at an academy at Castleton, Vt. In September, 1839, with his sister, Mrs. Jason Marsh, he made the journey from New York to Illinois, travelling by stage-coach, canal, and steamboat. At Chicago they met John Spafford, who, with his brother Charles and Jason Marsh, had gone West in advance to select a suitable home. The remainder of the journey, from Chicago to Rockford, a distance of about one hundred miles, was made in a lumber wagon.

The time from 1839 to 1846 was spent on a farm. In those days their only market was Chicago, to which they hauled their grain, and considered themselves fortunate if they received fifty cents a bushel for wheat and one dollar and fifty cents per hundred for pork. From that time (1846) until 1850, Catlin Spafford engaged in mercantile business. In 1848, he, with others, built a saw-mill, the first attempt to utilize the water power of Rock River, which has since become the source of the prosperity of Rockford.

About this time he, with many others, became a victim of the "gold fever," and on the afternoon of March 25, 1850, he started for California, leaving behind him his bride of the morning. He arrived in Sacramento about the 1st of August, having spent four months in the trials and hardships incident to a journey across the plains at that early day. After two years spent in gold mining he returned to Rockford, which has been his home ever since. In 1854 he entered the banking business, and since 1864 has been president of the Third National Bank of Rockford. He has been closely identified with the business interests of the city, and with many of the enterprises contributing to its prosperity and welfare.

"Married Feb. 13, 1854. She was of New Haven, Conn. He was born in Sharon, N. H., Oct. 3, 1826, and learned the machinist trade in the adjoining town of Peterboro. He removed to Boston in 1846, and there gained that thorough mastery of the laws of machinery which enabled him in after years to perfect his numerous inventions. At the age of thirty-one, he was made superintendent of the Ladd, Webster & Company Sewing Machine Manufactory, and from that time until his retirement from active business in 1885, his life was an extremely active one. He was soon recognized as a leading mind in his vocation, and his inventions and improvements of machinery have placed him in the foremost rank of inventive geniuses. During the war he superintended the construction of tools for making the government rifles while with the Providence Tool Company. From 1860 to 1867, he was occupied in developing, perhaps, the most notable of his inventions. These consisted of a set of machines for preparing bristles for brush-makers' use. They are very complicated in their nature, and are still used in their original form largely in Baltimore. They stand alone, and have no competitors in excellence and time-saving properties for combing, dragging, and preparing the bristles ready for the brush. For the eight years previous to his retirement, he was superintendent of the Peet Valve Company. He now resides on his farm at Milton, Mass."

SUPPLEMENTARY RECORDS.

THE records of families here introduced were received too late for use in their appropriate places, or have baffled the effort to establish for them an unquestioned location in the order of the generations.

The incorrect statement on page 84, concerning the early death of the wife of Amos Spafford (234), arose from a misapprehension of a passage in a letter of his, dated at Orville, Ohio, Sept. 9, 1785, in which, beside allusions to his own work and his surveys that season, a hundred and fifty miles to the north, he speaks of his three children — all he then had — as claimants on the love of their aunt, to whom the letter was written, and who, it was hastily assumed, was thus placed in the position of foster-mother to them. The following record throws a different light upon this matter. The number of the generations is indicated, when known, by the small figures at the right of names.

(234.) MAJOR AMOS SPAFFORD⁵ and OLIVE BARLOW.

He was born April 11, 1753, at Sharon, Litchfield County, Conn. PEDIGREE OF THE ENGLISH FAMILY OF SPOFFORTH.

WE take pleasure in introducing here a pedigree which will be found of great interest, tracing as it does a line of descent covering some eight hundred years on English soil, it being kindly furnished for this purpose by Mr. Markham Spofforth, of London.

We have felt obliged to change it from its original chart form, that it may be the more conveniently incorporated in this volume, and, for the sake of brevity, must refer the reader to the first ten pages of the Introduction, where will be found brief historical notices of the earlier generations; and take up the line of descent with Bryan Spofforth, rector of Barton, the nineteenth generation from Gamelbar de Spofforth; the number of each succeeding generation being indicated by small figures at the right of the names. The stars, as in the main part of this work, have been supplied to show what names appear as the heads of families in the following generation. In all other respects the original is copied as nearly as possible.

REGINALD SPOFFORTH.

THE love of music is a characteristic so strongly marked in most of those who bear our common family name, and so great is the interest manifested by many in him whose name stands at the head of this page, that we take pleasure in introducing here a biographical sketch of one who attained somewhat of celebrity in the early part of the present century as a professional musician and musical composer; whose works are perhaps mostly represented in the minds of many by the familiar glees "Hail, Smiling Morn," and "Hark! the Lark at Heaven's Gate Sings"; with the majestic old hymn tune, "Tolland."

We are enabled to do this through the courtesy of Mr. Richard S. Spofford, who obtained in England a volume of the published works of Mr. Spofforth, containing about fifty glees, arranged for varying numbers of voices, from three to eight; the compositions, by their sprightliness and their tenderness, proving their author to have been possessed of talents of great versatility and breadth.

The book contains a memoir of Mr. Spofforth, written by one who is evidently an admirer and a warm personal friend.

We give but an abstract of this quite extended tribute, but enough to serve as a portrayal in outline of a character of great refinement and artistic feeling. — A. T. S.

"Reginald, the son of William and Elizabeth Spofforth, was born at Southwell, Nottinghamshire, England, in the year 1770, being the eldest of a very large family.

"Southwell is famous for its venerable collegiate church and its ecclesiastical establishment, and Mr. Thomas Spofforth — an uncle of Reginald — was for many years its organist, justly acquiring celebrity, not only for his instruction on the organ; but for the order and regularity of the choir, so that his pupils obtained preference in several cathedrals. The nephew gave early indication of his talent in music, which the old gentleman — an enthusiast in his profession — hailed with delight, and took upon himself the care and expense of his education: the young Reginald being articulated to his uncle and placed in the choir as a singing boy.

“Attendance at school twice a day and church duties as often left little time for practice, but such was his zeal and the rapidity of his progress, that early in his apprenticeship he was able to officiate as organist in his uncle’s place.

“Frequent concerts at Southwell and the adjacent towns gave opportunities for the exhibition of young Spofforth’s skill with the harpsichord and the violin, and Sir Richard Kaye, Dean of Lincoln, being present at one of these entertainments, was so much pleased with his efforts that he invited him to his house and gave him the situation of organist at Lincoln Cathedral, a position which he resigned—at the age of nineteen!—that he might seek a broader field in London.

“A letter from his friend, the Dean, introduced him to Dr. Cooke, organist of St. Peter’s, with whom he was a favored pupil three or four years, frequently executing the Doctor’s professional duties in church.

“At the suggestion of his teacher, he competed, in 1793, for prizes offered by the ‘Noblemen’s and Gentlemen’s Catch Club’ for ‘serious’ and ‘cheerful’ glees. He won both prizes with his compositions, ‘Where are those hours?’ and ‘See, smiling from the rosy East.’* A year later we find him at work arranging orchestral music and drilling the chorus at Covent Garden Theatre, as a means of strengthening his pecuniary resources, but he declined the very flattering offer of musical composer of the theatre, long held by Mr. Shields, lest the sudden calls to produce music on emergency might too severely tax his nervous energies, which were never strong.

“While shrinking from private society through his great shyness and sensitiveness, he was active in the several musical enterprises of his time in London: associating with such men as Dr. J. W. Colcott, Robert Cooke, the Webbes, and Thomas Greatorex, in the management of the Concentores, a society of twelve members holding monthly meetings for the trial of manuscript compositions, and for musical discussion and criticism, and The Madrigal Society, which was organized in 1741 and still flourishing in 1830, and of which Mr. Spofforth was at one time conductor.

“Though his infirm health and natural timidity impaired his success as a public performer upon the pianoforte, he was much-sought as a teacher, and in that calling he was patient, thorough, and eminently successful; so laborious withal, that he frequently taught ten or twelve hours without pausing for refreshment.

“This ill-judged attention to professional work so depleted his strength that he retired from teaching; and having received a timely and ample legacy from the uncle who, in his youth, perceived his genius and opened the way for a development of his powers, he sought a home with his sister in Brompton, where he died Sept. 8, 1827, a bachelor, in his fifty-eighth year; his remains being interred under the church at Kensington.”

A CHAPTER OF PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS.

BY JEREMIAH SPOFFORD, FROM THE EDITION OF 1869.

To relieve the dry details of names and dates, and with the hope of interesting some who may not find their names, or those of their ancestors, on these pages, the writer proposes to devote a space to the times which have passed in review during his somewhat extended period of observation, and in which six generations have been more or less interested, — having seen this number of generations in several instances, including his own direct line.

It was my fortune to come upon the stage of action immediately after the Revolution. The friends by whom I was surrounded in my earliest years had been actors in it; many had served in the armies, others had devoted a large part of their estates and an important period of their lives to its success, were imbued with its spirit, and it was the subject of their daily conversation and their evening tales. In addition to these, a few of the surviving soldiers of the old French War still lingered here. I have heard an ancient connection of the family relate how he, with other soldiers, drew the cannon across a morass, and up the height in the rear, and accomplished the capture of Louisburg, in 1775. And one of the captors of Quebec, who fought on the Plains of Abraham, still walked among us. I call to mind the appearance and conversation of many soldiers of the Revolution, who fought at Bunker Hill, Saratoga, and Trenton, and have a vivid recollection of the spirit and interest with which they “fought their battles o’er again,” and gloried in its final success, while they related its sufferings and privations. The late Rev. Dr. Samuel Spring, who went as chaplain with Arnold and Burr up the Kennebec, and through the wilderness of Maine and Canada, and stood by Montgomery when he fell on the cold night of Dec. 31, 1775, before the walls of Quebec, was many years pastor of the North Church of Newburyport. I have seen him many times, and heard him preach in Mr. Braman’s pulpit in Georgetown. The spot, marked with a marble slab bolted to the everlasting rock, inscribed, "Here fell Gen. Montgomery, Dec. 31, 1775," I visited Sept. 27, 1850. It is at the upper end of the river street, whose width alone separates the river from the frowning cliff two hundred feet in height, which street no gate or barrier now intercepts.

I knew a tall member of Washington's life-guard, who used to labor for my father and others. I was acquainted for years with a neighbor, whose forehead was grazed by a ball at Bunker Hill, and had a distant relative whose arm was shot off by a cannon ball at Trenton. Two others of my acquaintance survived the horrors of the Jersey prison ship.

Our family, I believe, was to a man devoted to the cause of American independence. I never heard of one who was a Tory. Two were soldiers for long terms. They were mostly substantial farmers and heads of families. They were both officers and soldiers in the local militia, and performed short terms of service in arms, and bore heavily the taxes, privations, and hardships of the war.

I have a commission of my great-grandfather, John Spofford (of the third generation), as lieutenant, signed by Gov. Shute in 1721. He was captain in 1731.* I have a commission of Abner Spofford, as captain in the local militia in 1743. His brother, Daniel, was colonel in 1775, and marched in command of the regiment to Cambridge, arriving too late to share in the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1776. No name is oftener recorded as on the Committee of Safety and other committees for raising men and money during the war, and he represented the town in the Legislature in 1776, and was of the convention that formed the State Constitution of 1780. Eliphalet, my grandfather, was captain of a company, and my father a private, in the march to Cambridge. William, brother to Eliphalet, is supposed to have died in the army, in the French and Indian War of 1755, and Moody Spofford, Esq., the eminent architect, was lieutenant in an expedition to Ticonderoga during the War of the Revolution.

Many others of the family did good service in the great Rebellion. Several lost their lives, and one, a resident at the South, served voluntarily in the Rebel Army.

I have seen many of the officers and soldiers of the army of the Revolution, of the War of 1812, and of 1861, and it is curious to observe that notwithstanding the general simplicity of the times and the poverty of the nation, the show and cost of the uniforms of the armies, especially among the officers, were double in former times to those during the late Rebellion.

An immense change has taken place in the use of books and newspapers and magazines within my recollection. A post rider came his weekly rounds with the Newburyport Herald through Newbury, Bradford, Boxford, and Rowley, and it was the only paper that came into this region previous to 1800. There was no post-office in Groveland till 1809, nor in Georgetown or Bradford till some years later. I was postmaster here some years,* and have seen the quarterly returns of this office the first year; the receipts did not exceed five dollars per quarter, and the delivery of but a single Boston paper. Though books and papers were not sown broadcast over the country as at present, yet what they had were much more thoroughly read and studied. With one or two papers a week, nearly every article was perused, and many an article or item fixed in memory. While books and periodicals have increased a hundred-fold, and the cost of education fourfold, it is doubtful whether the people are any better qualified for the duties of life than formerly.

A few of the fourth generation of the Spofford family were on the stage when I first took knowledge of my surroundings. One grandfather, Col. Daniel Spofford,† survived till my sixteenth, and his eighty-fourth year, and died April, 1803. He was active in body and mind to his last year. He wore a green cap when about his work, and a white wig in the deacon's seat at church. Samuel and Amos, heads of other families in Boxford, were of the same generation, and several females are still in my memory. Probably many others of that generation survived to this century in their distant homes, but as they were diligent laborers and roads were bad, visits were few and far between. Mails and post-offices were scarcely known, so that very little knowledge was ever transmitted from the descendants of those who removed to distant places, and many members of the family have owned themselves indebted to the first edition of our humble pamphlet for any knowledge of their ancestry in England, or several of the first generations in this country.

Many houses in the early generations were situated in the open fields, and the people passed out on the Sabbath and other occasions through gates and bars. Such was the situation of my native place through the whole of my grandfather's occupancy and down to 1797, when I remember the removal of several gates. I can now show many neglected paths through pastures and woods, deep worn by the heavy teams which conveyed the timber to mill or market, over which a chaise or light wagon never passed.

While writing this sketch, has occurred the great eclipse of Aug. 7, 1869, upon which much has been written, but having witnessed the eclipse of June 16, 1806, total here, this last has appeared to me of very small account. It has called up many and some extravagant and unreliable accounts of that of 1806, of which I here record my own impressions. I was eighteen years of age, had just been studying Furguson's "Astronomy" with deep interest, and had waited with impatience two or three years for the time to arrive. The day was unclouded. The elder members of our two adjacent families were absent; my uncle and father building the first bridge from Newburyport to Plum Island. With sisters and cousins assembled we watched its advance. About 11 A. M. the light grew pale and white, but was still abundant for clear sight, till the point of the shadow passed over us. We saw its approach, and the instant we entered the circle of totality it was dark. Seven eighths of the remaining light went out, when the last pencil of rays was cut off by the moon. The dark circle of the shade of the moon was one hundred and four miles in diameter, which passed us in about four minutes. As the whole hemisphere was partially lighted, except the cone of total shade, whose point just reached our earth, it was as light within that circle as a starlight night, and some light was apparent round the edge of the moon. The sensation of viewing a scene which would not be viewed here again by any then living, was intensely interesting and never to be forgotten. When the first pencil of rays struck down upon us all interest was gone, and the light assumed its heat and color as we gradually passed out of the partial shadow. A few fowls went to roost, and crowed and cackled with surprise at the return of light. All passed on, and I alone, of those who viewed it together, remain to recall the scene.

At the date of this scene, I still resided on my paternal acres, of which no title is known to exist more ancient than the Spoffords'. Among these hills and vales and water-brooks were all my early wanderings and earliest attachments. I could point out the paths they travelled, the waterfalls they used, and cellars they built over, occupied, and deserted, and a few of the earliest houses were still remaining. I left with great reluctance, and regret that so many others have followed my example, and left those happy homes and scenes of youthful joys, to the cold calculation of strangers and foreigners.*

In my memory the roads were narrow and little travelled. The houses, all but two or three, unpainted. No single horse wagons, and but two or three double wagons, and half a dozen chaises were used in what is now Georgetown. The people were nearly all farmers, and I can recollect but two or three families who did not work on their own lands and live in their own houses.

From 1770 to 1820 there was little or no gain of inhabitants in this region, as tax lists in my possession, my own observation, and the census will show. We considered our towns, the county of Essex, and the State, filled up, and families were removing every year to people New Hampshire, Vermont, and Maine. Ohio alone was known, or scarcely heard named, of the great West, and much anxiety was felt how people who remained here were to be supplied with wood and timber much longer. But I have lived to see our State increase from 379,000 to 1,400,000; Boston from 20,000 to 220,000, and the towns and cities of old Essex in proportion, and our forests apparently on the increase: and the nation has gained in population from 4,000,000 to 40,000,000.

The old Georgetown church had a tall spire, and was unpainted, except the trimmings, when I left in 1813, and no bell had sounded from its tower. A Baptist church stood near Stickney's mill, with neither tower nor paint. Pastorates lasted half a century. Ordinations were great occasions. I remember that of Mr. Braman, June, 1797; its vast concourse of people, and its profusion of refreshments in private houses, and for sale on the Common.

The old church which did service that day was raised in 1769, and now completes its one hundred years. In it I attended worship from eight or ten years old to twenty-five. Well do I remember the high pulpit, the arched window, the sounding-board, the deacons' seat, and the galleries on three sides. The pews were square and surmounted with banisters; a "body of seats" occupied the centre of the house, but the seats had been taken up at different times and the space sold for pews, and such was the manner of building the two rows of pews which at first surrounded the church — the ground floor was sold and the pews were built by the owners. I have often heard my parents relate circumstances of the raising and finishing of that house, and different members of the family had an important agency in its erection. I have heard preach in that house, Dr. Spring, before named; the aged Dr. Joseph Dana, of Ipswich; Cleveland, of Essex; Huntington, of Topsfield; Bradford, of Rowley; and Professor Woods, then of West Newbury; and was personally acquainted with Dr. Parish, of Byfield, well known as an orator, theologian, and politician; and my mother, at fifteen years of age, heard the first sermon in it, by Rev. George Whitefield.

I was many years contemporary with and the friend and physician of my uncle,* the architect and master builder of the first Haverhill bridge, in 1794, also of the Rocks and Andover bridges across the Merrimack, also one across the Connecticut, at Windsor, Vt., and across the Piscataqua between Portsmouth and Dover. Timothy Palmer, the "celebrated New England bridge builder," was his apprentice, and I distinctly recollect the model of the arch patented by him with the knowledge and consent of my uncle, with every timber and bolt in due proportion, as got up in my uncle's shop. Palmer went South with several Essex workmen and built the first bridges across the Schuylkill at Philadelphia and the Potomac at Washington. He resided many years in Newburyport.

I recollect the light and beautiful arches of the first Haverhill bridge, springing from the abutments and piers, with lattice railings for safety, as seen from Chadwick's ferry boat below. I remember being led over the unfinished bridge and seeing through into the water. Raising the floor to the middle of the framework, and a ponderous covering destroyed its picturesqueness, beauty, and symmetry.

THE SPOFFORD FAMILY ASSOCIATION.

AT a meeting held in Boston, March 23, 1886, to consider the question of celebrating the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the arrival in this country, in 1638, of John Spofford or Spofforth or Spafard, — the named being variously spelled in records where his name appears, — it was decided to form an association for the purpose of promoting a friendly acquaintance among persons bearing the family name, and also to hold a reunion some time in the year 1888, which should be a suitable commemoration of the event in question. A temporary organization was effected by the choice of Philip Augustus Spofford, of Malden, as president; Austin A. Spofford, of Lawrence, as secretary; and John A. Spofford, of Malden, as treasurer.

In furtherance of the object in view, it was voted to hold an informal picnic on June 17, 1886, on the farm in Georgetown, Mass., where the progenitor of our race in America spent many years, the spot being now in possession of Mr. Charles Sewall Spofford. For a report of the doings of that day we are indebted to Mr. Hiram N. Harriman, himself of Spofford descent, and one of the editors of the Georgetown Advocate, from the columns of which paper we make the extract.

“At least five hundred persons were present. Had the morning opened fine, twice that number might have been expected. They came by rail from all directions, and as the old mansion is a long half-mile from the station, barges were provided to carry all who wished to ride. Two large barge-loads came from Lowell, via Haverhill, and vehicles of every size and shape brought families from the neighboring towns. The old house was gayly decorated with flags and bunting, and nearly every room was open to the use of the family. In it were exhibited the old cradle which rocked several generations, the foot stove by which the matrons kept their extremities warm during the long sermons of Parsons Chandler and Braman, the sword and belt, a part of the horse equipments, and other articles of interest were viewed with pleasure by the company. The barn was open to the visitors, the floor cleared, and the Georgetown Orchestra stationed there to furnish music for the entertainment of all. A few old-fashioned quadrilles and contras were danced, and we noticed dancing as spryly as the youngest, Mr. S. C. Heald, of Lynn, over eighty years of age, who married a Spofford.

The company visited many places on the hill, enshrined as present or former homes of their race; the primitive site in the field, with nothing except a more luxuriant growth of grass to indicate it, but carried down from generation to generation by tradition, was viewed by an interested party. A flag marked the site of the second home of the pioneers where many of the children of the third generation were born. The old Col. Daniel homestead represents the fourth generation.

Dinner was spread on tables in the old mansion, in the orchard, and under the shade of trees in the yard. It was a basket picnic, and yet everybody's basket was free to any who wished to enjoy the contents. There was food enough for three times as many people as attended. Hot coffee and tea were provided by the management, in abundance.

During the day a business meeting was opened with prayer by Rev. Levi Rodgers, of Georgetown: records of last meeting read and approved. John C. Spofford, of Everett, was chosen President of the day, and Austin A. Spofford, Secretary. The Constitution drafted by the committee was read and adopted. It is as follows:—

CONSTITUTION OF THE SPOFFORD FAMILY ASSOCIATION.

Immediately upon the conclusion of the business meeting, the chairman introduced Hon. Richard S. Spofford, of Newburyport, who made a brief address, which is given below.

Mr. Spofford, after thanking the assembly for the honor conferred upon him in his designation as their orator, continued as follows : —

‘We have no occasion to entertain any other sentiment than one of modest yet conscious pride in the sturdy virtues of the race from which we have sprung. We know little, indeed, of our first ancestor, the earliest settler, prior to his emigration in 1638, beyond the fact that he was the son of a dissenting clergyman, the Rev. John Spofford, long vicar of a church in the West Riding of Yorkshire, known as the Minster of the Moors, and that he was of that family of Saxon origin which had given its name to one of the oldest towns and castles in England. But what is of more importance to us, we have information enough of his personal character to know that he brought to these shores a spirit of manly independence, of heroic fortitude and self-reliance, well fitting him for the trials and sacrifices to which, by the imperious force of circumstances, he was thereafter subjected. He was not merely a colonist from the Old World, but a pioneer of the New, illustrating, as such, that race tendency by which his descendants have been scattered far and wide, since by placing his house here in the then unbroken wilderness near the foot of the Bald Hills, his was among the earliest of the frontier settlements of the country, and surrounded by all those perils and drawbacks to which her ever-extending frontier has always been exposed. Living now, as we do, in the midst of populous commonwealths, and in a country whose continental limits reach from sea to sea, it is a strange reflection that within two hundred years the first dwellers upon the soil where we now stand were doing picket duty, as it were, in their day and generation upon one of the outposts of American civilization. The war whoop of the Indian, resounding with its terrible alarms through the stillness of the primeval forest, was to our common ancestors, John and Elizabeth Spofford, as to their children and grandchildren, no unfamiliar sound. We may possibly imagine, but it is difficult to describe, the tragic emotions of this solitary homestead, then far removed from the sheltering arms and sympathies of community life, never more needful than under such circumstances, when, for example, the tidings came that but three miles distant, and between the homestead and the supporting reserve of the fellow-colonists, their townsman, and probably their nearest neighbor, with his wife and children, had fallen victims to their death-dealing tomahawk, or when the northern heavens, lurid with the light of blazing Haverhill, told too plainly the proximity of the savage enemy following with relentless fury his bloody trail. Yet these are but the prominent incidents in the daily and nightly agitations to which the lives of our ancestors were accustomed, well calculated, indeed, to stir the heart with a grateful and reverent sense of obligation whenever contemplated by their more fortunate descendants.

‘From a family thus trained to hardship and self-reliance, it was to be expected that no proof of patriotic devotion would be wanting when, in the progress of events, their country called to arms, first in the prolonged contest with the French, and then, when confronted by the momentous issues of the War for Independence. In all of these conflicts, as well at Crown Point and Ticonderoga as at Lexington and Bunker Hill, and upon other battle-fields of the Revolution, and in the military struggles of later years, the representatives of our family have played no inconspicuous part. It was from the ancient homestead through which we have all walked with pious steps to-day, that Col. Daniel Spofford, a grandson of the first settler, went forth to command the regiment with which he joined the army under Washington at Cambridge, and it was with no undeserved distinction that he was afterwards elected a member of the convention by which the Constitution of Massachusetts was framed.

‘In the earlier generations, indeed at each successive epoch, the men of our race have been for the most part cultivators of the soil, and they have contributed in no restricted measure to the execution of that Herculean work by which the wilderness of the western world has been reclaimed, and these fair homes and fruitful fields, with their clustering towns and cities, have been established throughout the country, and especially along these rock-bound New England shores. We are wont to recall with pride those lofty virtues of which the early settlers were the exponents and for which they are held in the world’s heart in grateful remembrance; but how often do we pause to think at what a cost of physical toil, of days of rigorous labor, the mere material result has been accomplished of clearing the ground for those beneficent institutions whose development has accompanied our growth? The stone walls alone of New England, it is said, outmeasure to-day, on the basis of their cost in labor, estimated by modern standards, the value of the land itself; and for one, I never look upon them, moss-grown and gray with age, but with a sentiment of respect for their builders, to whose patient and determined labors they stand as a not unworthy monument.

‘But while the descendants of John and Elizabeth Spofford have been chiefly devoted to agricultural pursuits, there are not wanting many examples illustrative of their qualities in other departments. We have had our full number of men educated in the various professions, and as respects that of medicine, especially, I should be unfilial, indeed, if I were to omit the remark that from generation to generation, from the colonial period until now, the family record has never failed to embrace names of many distinguished and beloved physicians. In the mechanics and inventive arts, too, there have been numerous representatives of the family deserving of mention, while to various branches of literature it has made contributions of permanent and recognized value.

‘Of our race sprang one of the greatest, and, taking the period of his life into account, perhaps the greatest of philanthropists; I mean George Peabody, whose name is a word of honor on every lip by which the English tongue is spoken, and whose life of benefaction might well have inspired that noble verse of his friend, the English laureate: —

“Howe’er it be, it seems to me
 ’Tis only noble to be good,
 Kind hearts are more than coronets,
 And simple faith than Norman blood.”

‘The name of Paul Spofford, of the great shipping house of Spofford & Tileston in New York, was one which for half a century, while yet the American merchant marine contested with Great Britain for supremacy upon the seas, was closely identified with the mercantile growth of that metropolis. And coming down to our day, what race or family would not be proud to recognize upon its roll of fame a name so distinguished as that of our kinsman, the librarian of Congress, Ainsworth R. Spofford, one among the most learned of American scholars, as versatile, as learned, and standing in his peculiar province without a peer in the world; or that of his brother, the late Judge Henry M. Spofford, of Louisiana, distinguished alike for his professional and personal accomplishments, who, but for the storms of political faction, would have honored with his presence the Senate of the United States?

‘Here, in conclusion, I desire to add but a single word. There is one incident which has occasioned me regret to-day. While rejoicing in the presence of many members of the family of Spofford and its connections, some of them, too, in far advanced years, I grieve to think that the honored genealogist of the race, Dr. Jeremiah Spofford, of Groveland, to whose patient and intelligent research we are all of us so much indebted, could not have lived to participate in an event like the present, the success of which will be greatly due to the work he accomplished, and which, in his generous affection for his race, he dedicated to all the descendants of John and Elizabeth Spofford.’

Following the address of Mr. Spofford, a poem was read by the Rev. Mr. Rodgers, composed by Mrs. Lavina Spofford Weston, who is eighty-seven years and six months old. We give the following extracts:—

‘Our Father’s God, to Thee we raise
Our song of ever grateful praise;
Thanks for the joy that crowns these hours;
Thy grace descends like sunny showers.

‘We bless Thy name, so many meet
Our earthly sire to celebrate;
Thanks that so many here can claim
Our Saxon father’s worthy name.

‘With joy we’ve met, with love we part:
And let this spot be near our heart,
Where’er we dwell, whate’er our lot,
Let this old home be ne’er forgot.

‘One boon we ask of heavenly grace,
Among His sons to give us place,
To taste the joys of blissful rest,
In whom all families are blessed.’

The exercises concluded with singing by the entire company, after which they adjourned to the old barn, where dancing was held. The committee and prominent guests were furnished with garnet satin ribbon badges with the Spofford family motto printed in gilt, ‘Rayther Deathe Than False of Faythe.’ Great credit is due to Mr. and Mrs. Austen A. Spofford, of Lawrence, who did nearly all the preliminary work of this gathering.”

On June 17, 1887, another similar gathering was held at the same place, for the renewal of the acquaintance so auspiciously begun the previous year.

The exercises were of a less formal nature, consisting of prayer, a basket collation in the orchard, and reports concerning the progress made in arrangements for the reunion of 1888.

Impromptu speeches were made by several representatives of the family, and an extended poem, replete with historical reminiscences, written by Mrs. Weston. — a lady who retains in advanced years a wonderful mental vigor, — was read by Mr. Henry W. Spafford, of Rutland, Vt.

SPOFFORD FAMILY RECORD.

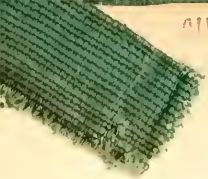

Attention is hereby called to the "Genealogy of the Spofford, or Spafford, Family," recently published by Miss Aphia T. Spofford, of Groveland, Mass., it being an outgrowth of a small work on the same subject, issued many years ago by her father, the late Dr. Jeremiah Spofford.

The present volume is an octavo of more than 500 pages, printed in fine style by Alfred Mudge & Son, of Boston, and among the illustrations are many portraits of representative men of the family, the coat of arms, the ruins of Spofforth Castle in Yorkshire, England, and other interesting views. The records include many thousands of names, each of which can be easily referred to by the very full index. The work has been prepared with great care and expense, and will be found to contain matter of much interest to all connected with the family name. The price is as low as the cost of the publication will allow, viz., $3.00 for the book, and the expense of mailing (24 cents), which may be sent in a Registered Letter, by Check, or a Post-Office Money Order on Haverhill, Mass. The kind patronage of persons receiving this circular is respectfully solicited by the subscriber,

MISS A. T. SPOFFORD,

GROVELAND, MASS.
